INTRODUCTION.

XCEPTING in the preparation of a few "family trees," but very little effort to gather genealogical information has apparently been given hitherto by any member of the large family bearing the name of Root. As there have been so few attempts to treasure up in a permanent form the important materials which have existed for a connected and general history of the family, the compiler of the present work has labored under the serious disadvantage which would be experienced by any one commencing in our time the work of collecting family records, and the memorials of the noteworthy individuals who have honored the name. Beginning at so late a date, when, by the dispersion of families from their ancient homes, so many memoranda which would have thrown clear light upon the social, religious and civil life of our ancestors have perished, it has often been extremely difficult to ascertain important facts concerning lineage and history, and the dates of births, marriages and deaths. Documents and letters thought to be of so little importance and interest in times past that they were hardly worth preserving, if they had been kept, would now be invaluable guides to an accurate knowledge of relationship, occupation, social standing, and individual traits of character, respecting those who have left the stage of action a century or two ago. It is not to be wondered at that our forefathers, amid the fatigues and hardships of settling the wilderness and the dangers of their combats with savages, should scarcely transmit family traditions to their grandchildren. It is not singular that the descendants of these early settlers, who fought the battles of the Revolutionary war, should not find time to write family memorials. But that those who have lived in calmer periods, with ample leisure and opportunity of research, should have been so unmindful of the origin and history of their Father's house, does seem somewhat unaccountable only on the theory of a general indifference to the subject. The lack of any great store of historical treasure even among those households remaining in the old homesteads, may be also partially accounted for by the fact that in many cases the oldest sons have emigrated from their places of nativity, taking with them family records, and the younger members of the household have not sought for that information on genealogical subjects which is more likely to be cherished by those in advancing years. Only those who have passed the buoyant, imaginative days of youth, when the mind is dwelling in bright anticipation upon the future, and have reached the years of mature feeling, begin to look back seriously upon the past, linking in their thoughts with the memories of generations gone by. In every family connection, those who have cherished ancient documents and family pedigrees, and preserved facts communicated by aged relatives, form the honorable exception to the general rule of negligence. If, however, in times past we have as a people earned the title of "Young America" in respect to the reckless manner in which we have consigned valuable information to oblivion, instead of entrusting it as a sacred legacy to generations following, there has been within a few years a reaction in the public mind favorable to the pursuit of antiquarian researches, and to the advancement of a better knowledge of family history in our land. The numerous Ecclesiastical and Town Histories, Genealogies, and other works of this class with which the press is teeming, show a laudable desire on the part of many to rescue from oblivion the memorials of the original settlers of our country and their descendants, and are taking their appropriate place in literature. However imperfect they may be, they will at least be highly appreciated by future generations. The organization of numerous Genealogical Societies, and their successful operation, manifests the same prevailing desire. "There is," said Daniel Webster, "a regard for ancestry which nourishes only a weak pride; but there is also a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors, which elevates the character and improves the heart. Next to the sense of religious duty and moral feeling, I hardly know what should bear with stronger obligation on a liberal and enlightened mind, than a consciousness of alliance with excellence which is departed." "No man of well regulated mind," says Cobden, "can feel an indifference respecting the genealogy of his family." Living in an age when the ancient and scriptural practice of keeping a "Book of generations," * or the family records of each tribe, is being revived, we may be thankful that while so much of untold value has been irretrievably lost, so much historical treasure is being permanently preserved.

Some few of our own name had already traced back their respective lines to the first settler from whom they claimed descent, and rejoiced in the possession of a Genealogical Chart, which in some cases exhibited the fundamental error of tracing back to the wrong Root. Mr. Jesse Root of Berlin, Ct., seems to have been the first who attempted to preserve certain valuable historical facts for the benefit of the family at large. He was a school-teacher, and for many years an invalid, and in his leisure time prepared a short Memorial of his ancestry, and recorded the traditionary lore that had come down in his family respecting the English origin of John of Farmington, which tradition, confirmed by investigations abroad, fixed also with reasonable certainty the origin of Thomas of Hartford and Northampton. Rev. Wm. S. Porter had collected lists of the Farmington Roots, Mr. John Root of Hanover, N. Y., had gathered some interesting facts concerning the long line of progenitors from whom he had inherited the name John, while Hon. Erastus Root of Delhi, N. Y., had traced out the early members of the Hebron branch, and others, as Messrs. Warren, Joel and Chas. G. Root, had worked at different sections. The invaluable Genealogical Dictionary of Hon. Jas. Savage formed also a guide in commencing this work.

It might be supposed that in some quiet nooks there are still to be found the Bibles of the Rootes brothers of Salem, or of Thomas of Hartford, or of John of Farmington, containing old records written in strange old characters, yet still legible, and comprising the lists of those numerous sons and daughters that constituted those old-fashioned families of two centuries ago, but these ancient facts and dates have been ascertained mainly from public documents or through well authenticated family traditions, not generally out of old Bibles or from faded manuscripts in ancient chests. The most reliable sources of family history are the ancient church records, especially of New England, furnishing dates of baptisms and marriages in the various family connections in the parish from generation to generation; and the town records, giving dates of births, marriages and deaths which are often very accurate and full, but in other instances exceedingly defective, having been ill-kept, lost, or burned. The decyphering of the more ancient manuscripts in some cases was quite a task, the written characters of those early times being quite unintelligible to one who has not made them a study. The land and probate records also have furnished very convincing proofs of relationship, thus settling questions held previously in doubt.

The balance of the material collected in this volume has been gathered by consulting registered deeds, inscriptions on tombstones, copies of family records, genealogical and historical works in great numbers, and newspaper notices, while tradition has added a few important facts. As errors in dates are inevitable, to some extent, in all publications of this class, the compiler will not be held responsible for the negligence or mistakes of other copyists, but only for his own omissions. The record of a single family has often been compiled item by item from a dozen different sources.

The families represented in this work are arranged by generations from the first to the eighth or ninth inclusive. This method was found to be the most practicable and satisfactory, although any system has its imperfections. The principal objection to the present is that the descendants of children of the older sons in the course of a few generations are almost a generation older than the descendants of the younger sons, though removed in the same degree from the ancestral stock.

Introduction.

The plan adopted, however, furnishes a plain and simple notation, and renders it easy to refer through the indexes and numbers to any individual of this extended family concerning whom the ordinary information has been gained, in the double relation of child and parent, the same number answering for both, if both these relations have been sustained. The numbering embraces only the children of those who bear the family name, and the spaces that occur in the figures were allowed partly for convenience in compiling, that the records furnished at the last moment might be inserted in their proper place. The records are confined principally to the male line, but include also the first generation of many descendants of other names, and in a few cases the second generation has been included in foot notes.

The labor involved in the compilation of the records comprised in this volume, and in insuring correctness of details, can of course be conceived of only by those who have undertaken a similar work; yet it has been performed in the intervals of more weighty and important duties in the service of the church of Christ, and it is believed that leisure time, though fully occupied, has not been wasted in this effort. As a labor of love, it has certainly at times afforded as much pleasure to the compiler as would the solution of a mathematical problem, to connect all the links of the diverse brotherhood in one common chain, and the work has been attended in the main with satisfactory results, although not with as much absolute certainty in every case. The prevalence of cherished names, such as Joseph, John, Thomas, Samuel, and William, Mary, Sarah, etc., in the earlier generations, when it was not customary to add a number of prefixes to the family name, has rendered it no easy matter to ascertain always the connection of any individual with the family at large, without considerable research. The careful examination of original sources in New England, and the comparison of dates have generally resolved all such doubts. Where two or more dates have been found pointing to the same event, the most probable has been adopted. Although the writer has not always been successful in obtaining answers to important queries through correspondence, yet in travel and intercourse with different members of the great household he has met with that generous confidence and hospitality which characterizes the family, and he is permitted to make acknowledgments to such, and to all others who have furnished oral or written statements that have contributed to the production of this book. The tables following will show how extensive has been the help afforded. If any of the name should find their pedigree omitted or imperfect, it will not be because persistent efforts have not been made to obtain the needed information concerning all the lines of descent, both by circulars and written application. Whatever imperfections may be manifest, however, the earnest interest displayed by so many persons in the object of these researches will doubtless lead to a favorable consideration of this humble effort on the part of all who have encouraged the undertaking.

CHAPTER I.

FAMILY NAME.

"I have many reasons for supposing that if I could trace my pedigree to its original root, it would reach a man by the name of Adam Root, or Root Adam."

—Rev. Walter Clarke, D. D.

ANY curious and interesting speculations have been indulged in concerning the meaning and origin of family names. D'Israeli has remarked in the Curiosities of Literature that monosyllabic names are less imposing than polysyllabic names. But the latter, though suggestive of aristocracy or nobility, are most often found to be of base origin, and are only noble by association. Our own Patronymic is neither so simple or so suggestive of a plain origin as it seems to be, and if in its present form it is less romantic than some other names, it is after all not quite so radical as it appears at first view. The general impression has been that the name was derived from the very common object in nature which has the same title — possibly that it was given to the founder of the family, whoever he might have been, on account of greatness of size or some

suggestive similarity, and thus was introduced into the circle of names at first as a sort of nickname, about the time that surnames became fully settled in use among the common people in the reign of King Edward the second (1307-27). Others have taken the name from a local origin, as descriptive of the nature or situation of the residence of the original Root, and that he dwelt in a place lying low at the base or foot of a mountain. Thus Arthur in his Etymological Dictionary of Family Names. Others have attempted to fasten a German origin upon it, conjecturing that it was at first KROOT, and that becoming anglicized the K was stricken off, as was said to be done in the case of a distinguished German reformer of that name, who both spoke and wrote in favor of the Reformation in the days of Melancthon, and whose name was written in English, Root. Others still are very confident in the hypothesis that it was originally spelled, in England, WROOT, or in the Saxon WRÔT, and that some of our ancestors many years back, either from ignorance or for convenience sake, dropped the W, and that the Saxon prefix was thus lost. The name ROUTH has also been suggested as the original name, but Routh was as likely to be derived from Root as the contrary. With reference to all these suppositions it may be said, that while they are not altogether improbable, they have no basis in any facts yet discovered in studying the history of the family. Another correspondent writes: "Our tradition has been that we are of French origin. I believe the name is French (Racine). Undoubtedly our forefathers left France at the time of the expulsion of the Huguenots, came to England, and finally to this country." In tracing the brotherhood from generation to generation we find that the name of the family has undergone radical and striking changes. The history of the Salem family

Family Name.

in this country indicates the changes that have doubtless occurred in a similar way in England during the progress of centuries. This family in their early settlement spelled their name ROOTES, which was in the course of a generation or two contracted to ROOTS, and afterwards very generally to ROOT. The Farmington and Northampton families clung to ROOTE and ROOTT for a time, but in less than a century the final letter, apparently so useless, had dropped off. Sometimes the name was written by those not of the family, ROTE. The most reasonable theory yet suggested is that the name originally was spelt ROOTES, and was of two syllables, and has suffered the loss of the two final letters by contraction. The Patronymica Britannica, a learned work by Lower, in which the origin of surnames is extensively investigated, says, with reference to our original patronymic: "Rootes — probably from Routes or Routtes, a commune in the arrondissement of Yvetot, in Normandy (Lower Seine)." Hon. Eleazar Root, formerly superintendent of Public Instruction in Wisconsin, confirms this theory. "I have understood," he writes, "that the name itself was in its origin Norman-French, and spelt Rootes, and pronounced in two syllables, the s being silent and the e having the sound of long a. I have found families in Virginia and Kentucky who preserved the original orthography of the name, and I have read the same in English law-books. It is supposed that the s came to be dropped by some of the name because it was silent, and that afterward, in pronunciation the two syllables of the name were contracted into one, and the final e dropped." We can reasonably believe this to have been the origin of the name as it is now generally written, for as the members of the family have traveled northward in England, and westward in America, certainly the modifications in spelling here suggested have generally taken place. If of

Root Genealogical Records.

Norman origin it was still perfectly natural that it should be conformed to the English idiom, and the French pronunciation simplified. Having reached its ultimate and most simple form, all who bear the name will agree that it cannot be improved upon even by the exercise of considerable Yankee ingenuity; that it is expressive of strength, stability, firmness, a prosperous growth and healthy development, and whatever is substantial in qualification or fundamental to human weal.

From all the facts that can be gathered, it would appear that there are not many of the name left in England. A correspondent of the name of Roote, born in England, writes: "It was often remarked in the family which I belonged to in London, that it was very probable that our family would die out, as we were not aware of any one else in London or elsewhere whose name was spelled Roote, and there were few of the name Root. The only person of the name I was aware of, was a Dr. Root, who resided in the parish of Bloomsbury, London." There were none of the name to be found at Badby, the ancient family parish, or in that section, when visited a few years since. There need, however, be no fear entertained at present that the family is dying out in this country, albeit the proportionate number of descendants in the last generation has somewhat decreased in comparison with the days of old, when eight children in a family were regarded as a proper average. The number of descendants of the name from the four distinct heads, Josiah, Thomas, John and Ralph, in our country, whose names are recorded in this volume, is over four thousand, and of descendants of other names, about fifteen hundred, while the whole number of descendants from all the Root progenitors in this country, through the male and female lines of various names in the seven or eight generations, may be safely estimated as at least one hundred thousand.

FAMILY CHARACTERISTICS.

'Tis poor, and not becoming perfect gentry,
To build their glories at their fathers' cost ;
But at their own expense of blood or virtue,
To raise them living monuments ; our birth
Our ill deeds forfeit ; and the wealthy sums,
Purchased by others' fame or sweat, will be
Our stain, for we inherit nothing truly
But what our actions make us worthy of.—Chapman.

IF the name borne by the family is in itself proper evidence of Norman ancestry, yet the Saxon blood has undoubtedly been largely interfused, and all the solid British traits have been finally developed under the culturing hand of a kind Providence amid the favorable conditions of progressive life in the New World. The combined testimonies of oral and written history make this a substantial family. From their first introduction into this country the early settlers of the name, though not from the ranks of the nobility, but plain farmers and weavers of cloth, took a prominent part in all social movements agitated by the people, in the political affairs of the communities where they dwelt, and in securing the welfare of the churches with which they united. The progenitors of the three lines traced out in this volume occupied a good social position among the Puritan settlers as worthy citizens, substantial farmers, or skillful manufacturers of domestic goods. They were men of intelligence and solid principle, and if not highly endowed with educational facilities, at least made use of their abilities for the common good. They were Puritans, disciplined in the school of severe persecution for conscience sake. Devotedly attached to the interests of the church, they sought to lay the foundations of the rising state on the solid rock of religious truth in God's word. Many of their descendants have occupied responsible positions in civil and military life, obtaining their full share of the positions in the gift of the magistracy or the people; while not a few have been engaged, in one form or other, in the service of the Church. While some have reached a conspicuous position in legal or political life, the larger number have exhibited in quiet circles those sterling and manly virtues which justly distinguish the untitled nobility of a free country. If, as the facetious poet Saxe writes,

Root Genealogical Records.

"Your family thread you can't ascend
Without good reason to apprehend
You may find it waxed at the other end,
By some plebeian vocation," it is at least pleasant to know that these plebeians were honest, capable men in their sphere of life, whose homespun virtues have shed upon their descendants the halo of a good reputation, and to realize, with the history of our ancestors before us, that "many poor men's sons are singularly well endowed, most eminent, and well deserving for their worth, wisdom, learning, virtue, valour, integrity; excellent members and pillars of a commonwealth."* When considering the ties that bind us to the common brotherhood, those are not lightly to be estimated who, though they have unsuccessfully battled with life's obstacles, have still been possessed of a courageous and hopeful spirit in severest trials, trusting in the Divine power and goodness. It must be promotive of a generous spirit to recognize the moral heroism of many of the family who were prevented by inexorable circumstances from reaching the more favorable positions they were aiming at. We can well afford to cherish the memory of a Godly ancestry, whose descendants, whatever may have been their worldly good fortune, possessed the elements of stability of character, devotion to principle, and faithfulness to civil and religious obligations, blended with the domestic virtues.

“The sweet remembrance of the just,
Like a green root, revives and bears
A train of blessings for their heirs,
When dying Nature sleeps in dust.”

The testimonies of several correspondents will doubtless be read with pleasure, and may lead to a more correct estimate of the common characteristics of the different branches and members of this widely extended connection.

Hon. Royal R. Hinman, formerly Secretary of State of Connecticut, and author of various genealogical works, writes in connection with an outline of the family: “I give the general features of the family, and it has been a good family and has produced its full number of able men—Lieutenant-Governor Root of this State, Judge Jesse Root of Hartford, were descendants, and other able men.”

From the Memorial of Jesse Root of Berlin, Connecticut, we read: “Our fathers were, I believe all of them, professors of religion; all of the Calvinistic order; and mostly men of distinguished piety, and particularly our grandfather (John Root of Kensington) and great-grandfather (also John Root). They were proverbial for honesty, and distinguished for a grave, dignified, reserved yet courteous demeanor. Grandfather in particular was a very exemplary character. Our fathers have uniformly been men of intelligence. They have likewise, I think without exception, been men of large stature and great physical power. Father was six feet two inches and well proportioned; our grandfather still taller, and I believe larger; great-grandfather not quite so tall, but of remarkable personal size and power."

Hon. Joseph M. Root of Sandusky, Ohio, thus describes the older members of the Westfield branch: "The old stock of the Westfield Roots were Puritans of the strictest sect, sober, taciturn, God-fearing men; tall, spare, but strong, dark, lank-haired, temperate, and long-lived. They lost much of blood as well as of property in the Indian wars, and were ever ready on call, and sometimes without human call, to 'gird up their loins and smite the heathen hip and thigh.' They were nearly all husbandmen, but occasionally they educated a son and devoted him to the Ministry. The good, and wise, and valiant Samuel, who gave his patrimonial fields to his native town, Westfield, out of which has grown the handsome clerical and educational funds of that town, has always been regarded as the brightest name in our line."

Mr. Warren Root of Burlington, Vermont, writes concerning his grandfather's family, consisting of nine persons (in the Hartford and Northampton line): "I recollect of a gathering of the family at his house. All of the children were there with their wives and husbands, except an aunt who always lived with my father, and was never married. They were all very large, fine-looking men and women, all weighed over two hundred pounds, and were over six feet high, except the girls, and they were all large women. I was then young, and the sight of so large a family, and so large, good-looking men and women, made an impression on my mind which I shall never forget. They were all men who commanded respect, and were useful members of society."

Mr. Joel Root of New Haven, Connecticut, says of his branch what is to a great degree characteristic of all the branches :

" These eight sons of Samuel by second marriage were in stature, with two exceptions, above the medium height, measuring from five feet nine to six feet, and in their prime weighing from 150 to 180 pounds ; were quick and active in their movements, and some of them very athletic ; of a bilious temperament, and subject to frequent attacks of headache, which in the case of some was uncommonly severe. In consequence of this constitutional tendency they could not pursue a sedentary employment, and those who learned trades of this character, so uncongenial to their natures, were obliged to relinquish them and engage in employments requiring active exercise in the open air. They were naturally ambitious and self-reliant ; whatever business they undertook that required prompt action and physical force they could accomplish with great expedition, and few could accomplish more in a given time. They were very systematic in their operations, the bump of order being very predominant. A place for every thing and every thing in its place was their theory and practice. They were fond of traveling, and were more or less engaged in business that occasionally called them abroad ; were observant of men and things, and to their intercourse with mankind rather than study, they were indebted for their general knowledge of human nature and practical ability in business matters. They were of a sanguine temperament, quick-tempered, and according to the saying, quick over it. They were ever ready to respond to any demand for their services to protect the injured or relieve the distressed. They were social and rather jovial in their intercourse, hospitable in the entertainment of friends, and uniformly received them with much warmth of feeling."

Mr. A. I. Root of Medina, Ohio, bears the following testimony: "The Root family have always been characterized by a great amount of energy and perseverance, and great mechanical powers; have always been in comfortable circumstances as far as this world's goods are concerned."

"This family," says Mr. Frederick P. Root of Sweden, Monroe county, N. Y., concerning the brothers of Gen. Erastus Root, "and most of their descendants, were tall and athletic men, many of them six feet, and some above in height. They have been characterized by a sound mind and business capacity. Farming has been the favorite pursuit, though some have followed other pursuits. All have been men of means and competency, none very rich, but of good character for morality and integrity."

Mr. John H. Root of Buffalo, N. Y. (the sixth John in the descent from John Root of Badby, England) writes: "It is said in the account which one of the family gives of its history, that John Root (of Farmington) was from the nobility in England, and that his wife was a descendant of the King's sister. I think, however, that the family have never prided themselves to any extent on these pleasant fables, though without doubt there are some of the Root family who would creditably fill any position, and give lustre and dignity to any family, however exalted." He also speaks of the great strength and courage of his ancestors, giving facts that are elsewhere noted.

Family Characteristics.

Hon. Ira Root of Newport, Ky., says: "All the Roots that I have known who were public men have been remarkably good speakers."

Rev. Lucius I. Root of Upper Alton, Illinois, gives the following reminiscences: "My grandfather used to say that he never met a Root that he could trace no relationship with. He used to tell about going to an uncle's (a tory, and the only one, so far as I know, in the connection) and taking pewter plates to run into bullets in the time of the Revolutionary war. The Roots were all tall on his side; characterized by shrewdness, noted for sarcasm; a strong anti-humbugitiveness; were generally good mathematicians and musicians; not peculiarly spiritual so far as I know; yet all my father's brothers died in good hope."

Respecting Timothy Root (the second) and his wife, Jemima Wood of Somers, one of their descendants, an aged mother, writes; "They were most excellent people, devotedly pious, and worthy to be among the number of those who were called in God's Providence to lay the foundation of a town. Before the building of the first meeting-house, the people used often to meet for public worship on the Sabbath at Mr. Root's. How grateful should we be for an intelligent, pious ancestry! How expressive the lines of Cowper:

'My boast is not, that I deduce my birth
From loins enthroned, and rulers of the earth;
But higher far, my proud pretensions rise —
The son of parents pass'd into the skies.' "

Dr. Bennett Field Root also refers to his parentage, speaking of his father who at the age of seventy-four retained almost the mental and bodily vigor of youth, his irreproachable character and piety, and ardent patriotism: "Often in relating incidents of the Revolution, the big tear would drop from his eye, and his voice would falter under the deep emotion which the relation of the trials and sufferings of those days brought to mind. All of our brothers and sisters early in life embraced the religion of Jesus, together with their companions, and became members of the Christian church; all of whom we hope to meet again in that mansion prepared for all that love the Saviour."

It is not meant to be conveyed by the introduction of these extracts that all of the family have attained the high standard of perfection, or even any of them, or that none have proved unworthy of their name, but they serve to show the prominent family traits, and general personal appearance, with which different individuals of various branches have been impressed. The members of the elder generations, long since passed away, were evidently men of very large stature, and well developed physical power. Their descendants have generally inherited height of stature, if not the full measure of their fathers' strength and breadth of frame. They have been in the general view, comparatively a long-lived family, a large proportion of those arriving at mature years, having reached the age of fifty or sixty, and the lives of others having been prolonged for nearly a century, while a few have passed even beyond this extreme boundary line. Good health, and a sound mind in a sound body, have been the inestimable blessings bestowed upon the large majority. Most of those bearing the name are distinguished by the prominent nose, most frequently of the aquiline type, light complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, a somewhat commanding presence, vivacity of manner, and a temperament requiring considerable activity in the life. This vigorous elasticity, exhibiting itself often in restless activity in every-day life, has been sustained by sound sleeping and generous eating.

Family Characteristics.

The wide-awake energy of the family, the possession of at least a good degree of intelligence, common sense, decision, foresight and perseverance, together with geniality of disposition, a frank and courteous demeanor, and generous humor, have been elements of that capability which has called so many into military positions, and made them popular in that sphere ; while the dignity and reserve of many others (though hardly concealing the dryest kind of native wit and sarcasm), their shrewdness in reading the characters of men, ability to inspire others with confidence, combined with energy and piety, have called many more into the various offices in the gift of the church, and have made them Deacons and Elders, Stewards and Class-leaders in the various religious organizations. There has been, it is true, a vein of eccentricity and independence which has sometimes manifested itself in odd ways, and has often led the Roots to do things in their own way, unwilling to be hampered by public opinion. But this independence has generally been united with good humor, and has not become an intolerable peculiarity.

But few have inclined to pursue for any length of time the confinement of studious life, and although many have entered professional callings, the large majority so doing have practiced in the medical profession, as being better suited to activity. About three-fourths, if not more, of the whole family have eschewed trades and mercantile business, and pursued the farmer's calling, and many who have risen above the need of the calling as a support, have continued to delight in its healthful pursuits, or take some active part in them. Much executive genius and force of character has, however, been displayed in mercantile, engineering or mechanical occupations, in the overcoming of difficulties, and large incomes have often been received in these callings ; but it is believed that a great many members of the household have found it much easier to make money than to keep it. At least, despising parsimony, they have been apt to make a generous and hospitable use of their means. A large share of the family have attained circumstances of temporal prosperity, and have taught the valuable lesson to the generation coming after them, that the path to honor, respectability, and usefulness, though it lies through difficulties and obstacles, may be successfully trod. The many narratives included in this volume of the rise of individuals, by well-directed and persevering efforts in the prosecution of the business of life, from poverty to comparative affluence, from insignificance to positions of usefulness and honor, are calculated to incite the younger members of the family at large to earnest endeavors to make the best of their intellectual resources and their circumstances in life.

While enterprise and resolution have not been wanting to lead many of the family to leave the old homesteads, and emigrate to new territories, and mark out new paths amidst privation and hardship, to seek out new fields of labor or usefulness, and patriotism has not been wanting to induce many to spring to the rescue of the nation in time of war ; they, with but few exceptions, have not been less distinguished, in comparison with all the rest of the tribe, as lovers of home and social joys, as preeminently fond of domestic scenes, and partial to those pleasures that are most permanent and elevating, in preference to those that are debasing and impure. The members of the Root family have generally been lovers of good music, being readily "moved with concord of sweet sounds ;" very many of them, indeed, have exhibited an uncommon talent as well as taste for the cultivation of their vocal powers, and the performance of instrumental music, while some have attained great proficiency in this science, and an extensive reputation.

We may therefore claim, without any departure from a modest estimate, that the family has manifested many traits of substantial worth, possessing largely that self-reliance, persevering energy, sound judgment, patriotism, and high-toned principle which lie at the foundation of prosperity in our free land. The records of history abundantly prove that many of the family were early identified with the best interests of the colonies, and others at a later period with those of the various commonwealths of the Union, and that throughout every generation the branches of our ancestral tree have flourished in renewed vigor, yielding as perennial fruit, unfailing devotion to the welfare of the nation, the cause of humanity, and the advancement of morality and religion, ever true to the family motto —

CHAPTER III.

MIGRATIONS.

The vision of your olden time,
Of all you leave so far behind,
Like some old legendary rhyme,
Will rise in dreams and haunt your mind.—Freiligrath.

ALTHOUGH the roots of our ancestral tree were not transplanted from England to America as early as 1620, when the Pilgrim fathers came across the stormy deep, members of the family arrived within fifteen or twenty years thereafter, when this country was yet in its wilderness state, and when the population numbered only a few thousands.* Most of them moved on with the newly formed Connecticut colonies to the very outposts of civilization, leaving behind them the comparative comforts of Plymouth, Boston, and other eastern towns, braving the dangers of savage warfare, under the inspiration of a controlling faith in Divine providence, anxious chiefly to secure that civil order and religious freedom which had formed their bright ideal of the New World, as they left their homes in England. Like the first settlers of Plymouth, possessing “Nobility of soul, by Nature giv’n

Nobler than blood of proud ancestral line,”

* It is estimated by good authorities that when the Long Parliament assembled, in November, 1640, twenty-one thousand two hundred English emigrants had arrived in New England.

Migrations.

they were willing to make great sacrifices to secure liberty to worship God in their cherished way, and to train their children after the Puritan model. Their immediate descendants, in seeking homes for themselves, and many of them with kindred desires to plant anew the gospel institutions, were among the first settlers of a great many towns in Connecticut, and Western Massachusetts, while their remoter progeny became the founders of other towns in New York, Ohio, Michigan, and finally the great west, spreading over all the new territories of the land. Ben. Franklin's sage remark, "I never saw an oft-removed tree, nor yet an oft-removed family, that throve so well as those that settled be," has doubtless been corroborated by experience in numberless instances, yet it has been equally verified that one migration at least to the newer settlements has infused new energy and activity in character, and generally promoted the temporal welfare, the moral well-being and the social standing of our widely scattered family. Those who have gone from the old homesteads in New England to plant the stock anew in the wilderness, developing the powers of a true manhood through privations and arduous labors amid the abounding resources of nature, have borne favorable comparison with those who have remained in the charming quietude of the ancestral home, surrounded by all culturing and refining influences of society in a more finished state; while those who have entered the marts of business in crowded thoroughfares have equally promoted their temporal prosperity. The disposition to transplant and take root in a new soil from generation to generation, seems to have been constitutional to the family.

It may be pleasing to some to take a birds-eye view of these emigrations.

The ROOTES FAMILY of Salem very early branched off to

Root Genealogical Records.

Boston and Newburyport, the lines in that direction apparently all being cut short by the premature death of the sea-faring members of that household. A permanent settlement was, however, made in Woodbury, Ct., by one of the sons, the descendants of whom are still found there in possession of the ancient homestead purchased by John Rootes. Leaving Woodbury, branches from this stock were removed to East Rutland, Vt.; have been found in Portland, Me.; New Haven, Plymouth, and Simsbury, Ct.; in Aurelius, Buffalo, Greenville, Hamilton, Mendon, Preston Hollow, Rochester, Syracuse, and other portions of N. Y. State; in Newark, N. J.; in Cincinnati, Fletcher, Morgan, Oxford, Piqua, etc., in Ohio; Liberty, Pa.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Baltimore, Md.; to some extent in the south, as in Arkansas and Virginia; in Tamaroa, Ill.; Connersville, Ind.; Springfield, Mo.; West Point, Iowa; and Humboldt City, Nevada.

THOMAS ROOTE of Hartford, not satisfied with his first position in Hartford, of which city he was one of the founders, removed with his six sons and daughters to a new section, becoming one of the first settlers of Northampton, Mass. His descendants were very numerous, and have been widely scattered. One branch from his oldest son JOSEPH removed to Northfield, Mass., and the descendants have been found in Western Massachusetts, where they settled in Bernardston, Byfield, Conway, Greenfield, Hatfield, Montague, Sunderland, and Wendell, removing north to Bennington, Brattleboro, Burlington, Craftsbury, and Williston, Vt.; westward to Cazenovia, Millville, New York city, Palmyra, Phelps, N. Y.; to Springfield, O.; southward to Hagerstown, Md.; Atlanta, Ga.; and New Orleans, La. Two other branches from Joseph removed to Lebanon and Farmington, Ct., and their

Two sons of Joseph remained at Northampton, and their descendants emigrated to Belchertown, Enfield, Ludlow, Southampton, Springfield, and Williamsburg, Mass. ; Hartford, Ct. ; Norwich, Vt. ; and Manchester, N. H.

THOMAS, second son of Thomas Sr., lived in Northampton till after the death of his first wife, when he seems to have removed to Lynn, Mass. His son Thomas went to Coventry, Ct., where his descendants lived for many generations, some of them emigrating to Bolton, Hartford, and Willington, Ct. ; Stockbridge, Mass. ; Providence, R. I. ; Bangor and Gardiner, Me. ; Grantham, N. H. ; East Windsor, South Royalton, Tunbridge, Vt. ; Athens, Chatham, Canaan, Cazenovia, Chelsea, Mexico, Mt. Another son of Thomas Sr., JOHN, went to Deerfield, Mass., but was killed shortly after by the Indians.

JONATHAN, son of Thomas Sr., had no sons, while his brother HEZEKIAH had an only son, Benjamin, whose descendants remained for a while in Northampton, Mass., and then this line disappeared.

JACOB, the youngest son of Thomas Sr., went to Hebron, Ct., and from him has descended a remarkably tall tribe, who either settled near the old homestead, or went to Colchester, Gilead, Glastenbury, Marlborough, Middle Haddam, Middletown, New Haven, and Rockville, Ct.; Granville, Milton, Quincy, Southwick, Springfield, and Worcester, Mass.; Piermont, N. H.; Fayetteville, Northfield, Sharon, Sherburn, Strafford, and Wheelock, Vt.; Barre, Barre Center, Batavia, Bouckville, Brockport, Canaan, Delhi, Eaton, Fort Ann, Franklin, Honeoye Lake, Kinderhook, Mohawk, Newark Valley, Oswego, Portage, Rochester, Sand Lake, Schodack, Springfield, Sweden, and Unadilla, N. JOHN ROOT of Farmington had six sons, the eldest of whom, John, went to Westfield, Mass., in company with his brothers Samuel and Thomas. The descendants of JOHN Jr. lived in Westfield, and some of the families from this stock emigrated to Boston, Great Barrington, Pittsfield, Sheffield, and West Stockbridge, Mass.; Enfield, Ct.; Auburn, Canandaigua, Center Lisle, Farmington, Lagrange, Mendon, Norwich, Rochester, Shortsville, Victor, Williamson, and Wyoming, N. Y.; Adrian, Constantine, Flint, and Montcalm, Mich.; and Florence, Ky.

Deacon SAMUEL, son of John Sr., had no children. His brother THOMAS, however, who went to Westfield also, had a numerous flock, whose descendants went to Barre, Becket, Chester, Granby, Greenwich, Great Barrington, Lenox, Lud-

STEPHEN, son of John Sr., the stalwart giant of Farmington, lived and died there, and many of his descendants remained there, one of them still retaining the old homestead. Others went to Berlin, Bristol, Southington, and Waterbury, Ct. ; West Stockbridge, Mass. ; Buffalo, Catskill, Corfu, Geneva, Hanover, Homer, Lockport, Phelps, and Sherman, N. Y. ; Harrisville, O. ; Liberty, Mich. ; Chicago, Ill. ; Louisville, Ky. ; Milledgeville, Ga. ; and to Virginia.

JOSEPH, another son of John Sr., lived at Farmington. His descendants, not very numerous, went to Bristol, Kent, and Meriden, Ct. ; New York city ; Aurora, Ill., and other western localities, and some as far southwest as Texas.

Root Genealogical Records.

CALEB, youngest son of John Sr., lived at Farmington, and his descendants scattered to Bristol, Canaan, Kensington, Meriden, Plainville, Southington, Waterbury, and Woodbury, Ct.; Great Barrington, Lenox, and Stockbridge, Mass.; Hudson, Paris, Warsaw, and Whitestown, N. The figure over the top of each family forms an easy reference backward to the same numeral in the left hand margin, where the birth and parentage are recorded; while this figure before the name and date of birth indicates as well where the marriage and family record of that individual may be found under the same number in its regular order of sequence (in the next generation) over the top of the family of which he or she becomes a head.

 The figures in the indexes refer to the number of the individual Roots, not to the page.

ENGLISH MEMORIALS

OF THE ROOTES FAMILY.

THE Rootes family who came to this country in 1634-7, and who settled in Salem, Mass., seem, by the Register of Josiah's name in the ship Hercules, to have emigrated from a parish called Great Chart, in the county of Kent, England. From an English historical and topographical work we learn that "this is a parish in the hundred of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, union of West Ashford, 69 miles from London (Coach-road 53) two from Ashford, nine from Tenterdon. South-east Railway to Ashford, thence two miles: from Derby through London, &c. 201 miles. Money orders issued at Ashford: London letters delivered at 7½ A. M. Post closes 9 P. M. The church living (Virgin Mary) is a rectory in the arch-deaconry and diocese of Canterbury, is valued at £25 os. 6½*d.* Present net income, £668: patron, Archbishop of Canterbury: contains 3,190 acres, 120 houses. The population in 1841 was 714: probable population in 1849, 821: assessed property, £3,960: poor rates in 1837, £372. The tithes were commuted in 1839. Fair, first Monday in April, for horses, cattle and peddlery."

The following chart gives the names of some of the family who must have been cotemporary with the father of Josiah Rootes of Great Chart, county Kent, but who lived in the adjoining county of Sussex.

AMERICAN RECORDS.

THE very common tradition of the three brothers who came over from the mother country in the early times of New England settlement, has at least proved itself true in the case of that distinct branch of Roots which came to Salem in the years 1635 and 1636. There were certainly three brothers, as appears by documentary evidence, if there were not five of the same family, who came to our shores about that period. Thomas, Josiah, and Richard Rootes were brothers, as may be shown by the deed of land given by Thomas senior to his nephew Thomas, son of Josiah, Richard being also mentioned in the instrument. [See Sup. Doc. No. IV.] There were two others of this tribe, if the Salem and Beverly records are correct, viz: Joshua and Joseph. Of this latter nothing further is known except the fact stated in the town records, that Joseph Rootes was among those chosen in Beverly in 1665 to make the rate for Rev. Mr. Hale's maintenance. It is not improbable that there was a slight error in the record, and that Joseph should have been written Josiah, as there does not appear to be further evidence of the residence of a Joseph Rootes in Salem. On the town record we find under date of 1636, that lands were granted as follows:

1. THOMAS ROOTS, 20 acres, f.
2. JOSHUA ROOTS, 20 acres, f.
3. RICHARD ROOTS, 20 acres, f.
4. JSIA ROOTS, f.

THOMAS ROOTES. He was a brother of Richard and Josiah, and probably of Joshua also, as all these names have the peculiarity of being spelled with s final. He lived in Salem, Mass., arriving there as early as 1636. In the year 1655, in a document that was acknowledged and recorded in June, 1683 [See Sup. Doc. No. IV], and a copy of which is in the Register Books, he deeded to his nephew Thomas, son of Josiah, all the land that was given by the selectmen in 1636 to his mother "the widow Mason," to his brother Richard and himself,—in all sixty acres. In the year 1657 he bought a dwelling-house and two acres of land adjoining his property, from one John Wilson, by the deed of which it appears that he followed the occupation of weaver, probably in addition to his farm labors. In 1663 he was among those chosen to fence in the land of the town. In 1679 he united in a deed with George Hodges and wife in the sale of some land to John Lovett, from which it appears that his wife's name was Katherine. [See Sup. Doc. No. I.] In 1680 Thomas Rootes, Sr., and wife made a "covenant and agreement" with George Hodges and wife, wherein it is stated that the former were unable at that period, by reason of age and weakness, to provide for their comfortable livelihood. An agreement was therefore made with said Hodges to board Thomas Rootes and wife, and provide for them necessary comforts during their lives, and said Hodges was to have the use and improvement of Roots' whole estate. A lot of land was reserved for the daughter Catherine Hodges, and the movables also were to fall to her. This was signed by Thomas Rootes and his wife Katherine, and by George Hodges and his wife Sarah. [See Sup. Doc. No. II.] In 1681 the two parties exchanged their dwelling-houses and adjoining lands, and Mrs.

Root Genealogical Records.

Katherine Rootes had doubtless departed this life, as her name was not affixed to the deed. [See Sup. Doc. No. III.] Thomas Rootes married again, however, as in his will of 7th of November, 1683, proved Nov. 9, 1683, he bequeathed his house and land where he then lived, in Salem, to his beloved wife Sarah, during her life, also certain moneys due him, and goods and chattels belonging to him. After her decease this property was to fall to the aforementioned Katherine Hodges, wife of Benjamin Daken of Beverly. [See Sup. Doc. No. V.]

JOSHUA ROOTES. He was of Salem, Mass., as early as 1636, where he, together with Thomas, Richard, and Josiah, had grants of land from the Salem authorities. The only additional information that has been derived concerning him is a record of his musical abilities published in Felt's Annals of Salem. In 1657 Joshua Rootes was to have forty shillings a year "for beating the drum to the trayne band whenever they have occation." In 1666 he was styled "Drum-mayor." There is no memorandum of any descendants of either Joseph or Joshua Rootes in the church or town records, or in the probate office.

RICHARD ROOTES. He lived in Lynn and Salem. In the latter place he was a member of the Congregational Church in 1636. He was made free March 9, 1637. He removed to Fairfield, Ct., taking with him his nephew John,* son of Josiah, and it is altogether probable that he left no children of his own. He d. in Fairfield before 1653, when his widow married Michael Try.

JOSIAH ROOTES. He was a brother of Thomas and Richard, and probably of Joshua of Salem, Mass. He had lands granted to him there in 1636, and again in 1649. He would appear to have been a native of Great Chart; a parish in England, about fifty miles southeast from London. He was, according to the record, the first of the name and of his family who came to this country. He immigrated here in 1634 in the ship Hercules, which returned in July "by St. Georges' to cut masts to carry to England." * The following memorandum from a historical work exhibits the form and process by which our ancestors emigrating at that period became settlers of New England: † "A list or register of all such persons as embarked themselves in the good ship called the Hercules, of Sandwich, of the burthen of 200 tons, John Witherly, Master, and thence transported from Sandwich to the plantation called New England in America, with the certificates from the ministers where they last dwelt of their conversation and conformity to the orders and discipline of the church; and that they had taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy." Among other names in this list appears that of Jos. Rootes of Great Chart, with the certificate of Robert Gorsham, curate of Great Chart, 20 March, 1634. He came to Salem, and settled on the Beverly side, and joined the Salem church in 1648. On the 23d of April, 1667, the brethren belonging to Bass River petitioned the first church of Salem to set off as a church, with Rev. John Hale as pastor, and the names of Josiah Rootes and family are attached to this petition. Hence he became one of the founders of the Beverly church. His wife's name was Susanna, as appears by the will made by him May 15, 1683, just nineteen days before he died. [See Sup. Doc. No. VI.] In this document he gave his personal estate to his wife Susanna till his youngest son Jonathan should come of age. His widow Susanna was one of those unfortunate ones arraigned for witchcraft. The complaint was entered by Thos. Putnam, clerk of the parish in Salem village, May 21, 1692, on account of injuries supposed to be committed upon his wife, a poor nervous body, and upon sundry other persons afflicted with the mania. The only evidence against her was that she was accustomed to absent herself from prayers while living in Andrew Elliott's house, and that said Elliott and wife heard her rise in the night and talk in the room below, also "flying in y^e chamber over said roome as if there were 5 or 6 persons with her." She had her trial before Justices Hathorne and Corwin on the 21st of May, and she was sent to Boston jail with other prisoners, Monday the 23d May, 1692, where she was put in irons. There is no record of her appearance before the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which had jurisdiction in cases of Witchcraft. She was probably discharged shortly from custody because of insufficient evidence, or released when the delusion abated. [See Sup. Doc. No. IX.] There is no record of her decease.

In 1669 (May 3) John and Sarah Wesson of Reading, sold thirty acres of land to Josiah Rootes the younger, in the county of Essex, mariner, situated in the town of Salem, on Bass River side, alias Beverly. On the 22d of January, 1673, he bought land of James Mears, in Boston, for the sum of £150. At a later date power of administration of all goods, estate, etc., of Josiah Rootes, formerly of Boston, Mariner, deceased, intestate, was granted to Bozoun Allen and Woodbury, Ct.

JOHN ROOTES, son of Josiah of Beverly, Mass. (See No. 4), b. a. 1646, in Beverly, Mass. He removed, probably in company with his uncle Richard, to Fairfield, Ct., where he had lands granted to him March 2, 1676, by his kinsman Michael Try, who married the widow of his uncle Richard Rootes. From that place he went to Woodbury, about 1681 or '2. He purchased a house and lot of Samuel Hull, Feb. 22, 1686. He also purchased lands of Nicholas Camp, town attorney, Nov. 8, 1687, and various other parcels of land at later periods, till he became possessed of a large real estate.* He has been supposed by some to have been the son of John Roote, Sr., of Farmington, but this could not be, as John of Farmington deeded land to his son John of Westfield. [See note appended to No. 2801.] That the Woodbury branch descended from Josiah of Beverly there is no room to doubt after the examination of the various facts on record. In September, 1739, a power of attorney was given to Joseph Roots, son of John of Woodbury, by the brothers and sisters of the former, "to inquire into the rights belonging to John Root, Senior, lying within the province of Mass. bay whether real or personal." This inquiry no doubt related to the remaining property belonging to the family there. The family names bestowed by John Roots upon his children are also strongly conclusive, in connection with the other facts, as to the relationship. The spelling of the name with s final in the records of Woodbury, and in other old documents that have been examined by the compiler, is another evidence of the same. John Roots was m. to Dorcas —. He d. May 25, 1723. She d. May 15, 1720.

* The following memorandum in the town records relates to one of these purchases: "Laid out John Roots upon the 5 of May 1696 8 acres of land between hopthey meadow and the Rocks on the West side of it — that is to say, two acres of houselot or homelot division, and the other six acres as last division, be it more or less."

Her father afterwards removed to Marblehead, Mass. Thomas Rootes', Jr., lots in Beverly were situated near the meeting-house, and part of his tract was bought for the graveyard. He seems to have disposed of all his property in Beverly and settled in Salem for a time. His uncle Thomas of Salem had, in 1655, granted to his nephew sixty acres of land which had been given by the selectmen, in 1636, to Thomas, Sr., his brother Richard, and the widow Mason, their mother, and which had come into the possession of Thomas Sr. [See Sup. Doc. No. V.] A part of this land had been sold in 1662, during the minority of Thomas Jr., by his father Josiah Rootes, to one Henry Kenny, without sufficient warrant, and the said land was delivered to Thomas Jr., by execution in 1683, Kenny recovering the damage from the estate of Josiah Sr., in 1684. Thomas Rootes Jr., removed to Boston, where he bought a dwelling-house and piece of land from Joseph Gridley, Dec. 21, 1676 (recorded Feb. 2 following), for £118. In the will of Thos. Jr., of Sept. 18, 1683, proved Jan. 31 following [See Sup. Doc. No. VII], he states that he is bound on a voyage to Jamaica, it would seem in poor health, and names only his wife, child and father-in-law. His wife refusing to act as administratrix after his decease, Ambrose Gale, his father-in-law, was made administrator. The inventory amounted to £201 01s. 00d.

JONATHAN ROOTES, son of Josiah of Beverly (4), b. a. 1666 in Beverly, Mass. He was the youngest son of Josiah Sr., and inherited his remaining property on coming of age. [See Sup. Doc. No. VI.] In 1687 he was in possession of his property, as in that year he gave conveyances of certain lots of land to various parties. In some of these documents he is spoken of as a "fisherman of Marblehead," at other times as "of Beverly." On the 9th of May, 1687, he acknowledged the receipt of all the property from the administrators of his father's estate, discharging them from any further claims or demands "from the Beginning of y^e world unto this day." In 1694—4—8m. "Jonathan Rootes and his wife were dismissed from the Salem church to the church about gathering in Middleboro, or if the br. (brethren) object, to the church at Plymouth." It does not appear from the records of either of these churches that he went to either place or joined either church. This was shortly after his mother, Mrs. Susannah Rootes, had been imprisoned and shackled for witchcraft, and it may be supposed that he did not entertain any too good an opinion of the people of Salem. He prob. m. Abigail Gale of Marblehead. He d. before 1729, as she was received into full communion in the Marblehead church, Feb. 2, 1729, and she had m. — Deveraux. cal Council convened at the First Society in Simsbury in 1770, in which he attempted to clear up the misrepresentations of his enemies. Another pamphlet published by him was entitled The Church of Christ described. During the last three or four years he had much difficulty with his church and congregation, and he was dismissed from this charge in the summer of 1772, after preaching there about fifteen years. He rem. to Rutland, Vermont, then a new country, where he bought a farm with three log houses, March, 1773. In Oct., 1773, he assisted in forming the church at Rutland Center, and preached a sermon which was published. The date of his settlement as first pastor in Rutland is somewhat uncertain, probably 1774. In 1776, Oct. 26, he preached the funeral sermon of Rev. Wm. Emerson of Concord, Mass., who d. at his house. Many were added to the church under his care in this place. In Oct., 1779, he preached the election sermon before the legislature at Manchester, N. H. According to the records of East Rutland church made some ten years after his death, he preached for the town about seven years; the residue of the time, about seven years, he was supported chiefly by individuals, but the town records show votes for the temporary hiring of him to preach as late as 1784. He received his A. M. from his Alma Mater, also from Yale College, also from Dartmouth in 1784. His will is dated March 15, 1787. Rev. PETER PHILANTHROPOS ROOTS, A. M., son of Benajah (28), grandson of John, (16), b. March 27, 1766, in Simsbury, Ct.; rem. with his father, when eight years old, to Rutland, Vt.; joined the West Rutland church, 1785, in his 19th year; graduated at Dartmouth College, 1789. He went immediately to Taunton, Mass., and studied divinity with Rev. Ephraim Judson, and was licensed to preach as a Congregational minister in March, 1790, by Bristol Association in Mass. He studied after this with Dr. Stephen West of Stockbridge, Mass., and preached in destitute places not far distant from that place. After leaving there he preached in various places, but declined any proposals for settlement, having a desire to travel, and being troubled in his mind on the subject of baptism. At length his views underwent a change, and he was led to connect himself with the Baptist denomination. In May, 1792, he went to Boston, and was baptized by Dr. Samuel Stillman, and studied with him till September following, when, on the 4th of the month, he was ordained in the ancient Baptist meeting-house founded by Roger Williams in Providence, R. I., as an evangelist. Shortly after this he traveled by land to Savannah, Ga., and performed an extensive missionary tour in that State, thence back to New England, preaching, and attending associations on the way, and visiting Dartmouth College, where he took his second degree. He next visited Virginia, laboring with great zeal in his Master's cause, and being instrumental in leading some to emancipate their slaves. In 1794 he published a book on baptism, at Hartford, Ct. For many years thereafter he was employed as an itinerant preacher by various missionary societies, locating for a short time only at any one place. He m. Jan. 2, 1797, Elizabeth, dau. of Jabez Keep, of Winfield, N. Y., b.

Y., and preached for the Baptist church there most of the time for two years, during which time there was a great revival, and many were added to the church. In April, 1803, he removed with his family to Pompey, and in March, 1805, to Fabius, N. Y., where his family continued to reside till he removed, March, 1825, to Mendon, Monroe county, N. Y. During eighteen years of missionary labor he preached in seventeen of the United States, and in Canada, traveling about 3,000 miles annually, forming many churches, and baptizing great numbers of converts; organizing associations of churches, and greatly promoting the welfare of his denomination, especially in western New York, by his earnest and faithful labors. He preached on an average about 275 sermons yearly, and with much acceptance. In one year, 1805, he records traveling about 4,000 miles, and preaching 372 sermons, besides attending funerals, visiting schools, the sick, etc. He d. in Mendon, N. Y., Dec. 26, 1828, in his 63d year. His widow d. Dec. 17, 1861, æ. 85.

Rev. JUDSON ADONIRAM ROOT, son of Jesse (62), grandson of Jesse (25), b. May 11, 1798, at Woodbury, Ct. He was graduated at Yale College with honor in 1823, and received his theological education at New Haven. He was m. May 5, 1828, to Emily M. Peck of New Haven. He was settled as a Congregational minister at North Branford, Ct., 1828-1834, and at North Madison, Ct., April, 1841-April, 1842; at Terryville, O&t., 1846-April, 1847, and subsequently at Westville, Ct., in the town of New Haven. He was also principal of the Young Ladies' Collegiate Institute of New Haven. "As a preacher he convinced men of truth, righteousness, and judgment to come. It was the peculiar merit of his style of preaching that he appealed, logically and forcibly, to the reason rather than the passion of his hearers; and he was permitted to witness blessings upon his labors. His health was never good, and he was several times prostrated by hemorrhage of the lungs. But he was never idle, and when unable to preach, taught with great success. As a teacher he is remembered and honored by many. It may be said of him, that in whatever position Providence placed him he proved himself conscientiously faithful, earnest and energetic, and evidently effective. He often said, 'I would rather wear out than rust out,' and he exemplified his maxim only too well. His last sickness was long and trying, but its close was peaceful and triumphant." He d. The following from the pen of Rev. S. P. Fowler of Danversport, Mass., contains an account of the arraignment of Mrs. Susanna Roots, from the legal documents of that period :

The complaint was entered against Susanna Roots by Thomas Putnam, clerk of the parish in Salem village. His wife, a poor nervous woman, early in the delusion was supposed to be tortured by witches, which foolish notion extended to other members of his family, particularly to his daughter Anne Putnam, who became one of the most distinguished in the circle of accusing girls. Thomas Putnam seeing the distressed condition of his family, resorted to all sorts of methods to relieve his wife and daughter from the tormenting witches, calling in the aid of ministers and religious people to pray for them, and putting forth constant efforts to detect witches in his neighborhood. What caused him to suspect Susanna Roots I do not know. His complaint is dated May 21, 1692. Susanna had her trial before the Justices Hathorne and Corwin on the 21st of May, and she, with others, was sent to Boston jail, Monday the 23d of May, 1692. She was put in irons, for I find a bill presented by the jailor, for shackles for ten prisoners received on the 23d of

Root Genealogical Records.

May. I find no record of her appearance, as yet, before the court of oyer and terminer, who had jurisdiction in the cases of witchcraft. As to the fate of Sergeant Thomas Putnam, the parish clerk, and one of the most bitter persecutors of the supposed witches, after the dismissal of his pastor, Samuel Parris, he became his greatest enemy, and was a swift witness against him in his (Parris's) endeavors to retain part of the parsonage lands. Ann Putnam Jr. (as she is called in the records, her mother being also named Ann), Susanna's accuser, after the delusion was passed, made a humble apology for the folly of her conduct, but was careful to lay the whole blame of her silly conduct in this most extraordinary affair—the Salem witchcraft—to the devil. In her confession before the church, Aug. 25, 1706, in Rev. Joseph Green's day, he having succeeded Parris in the ministry at Salem village, she says that she was deluded by Satan, had no malice, and what she did was done ignorantly, and repeats her assertion she was deluded by Satan. She was admitted to the church the same day she made this confession, Aug. 25, 1706. John Putnam, who was associated in the complaint against Susanna Roots, was a member of the village church, had often been one of the board of selectmen, and representative to the General Court, was employed to see the law, respecting the chatechizing of children, duly executed in the village, etc. The following are the court documents in relation to Susanna Roots:

By me JONATHAN BIBS,
Cunstible of Beuerly.

The following was found amongst the witch papers, and appears to have been used at the examination of Susanna Roots before the justices. It is all that I have been able to discover as yet:

An information if it might be any help in the examination of y^e person before you goode Roots. I being in y^e house of Mr. Lawrence Dennis sometime sence she was suspected for what she is now before you and there was likewise Leonard Austin of our town of Beuerly — said Austin then said that he thought she was a bad woman. His reason was that he living in y^e house with s'd Roots not long since, and when he went to prayer at any time with his wife and thought s'd Roots would accompany them in s'd Duty but did not at any time, but would withdraw or absent herself — and farther when myself and wife were gone to bed, and she went unto her bed, she would rise in y^e night and we could her talk in y^e room below; Flying in y^e Chamber over said roome as if there ware 5 or six persons with her — more said Austin might speak if called thereunto, as far as knowing more concerning Roots.

ANDREW ELIOTT.

Root Genealogical Records.

I am inclined to think this evidence of Andrew Elliot was all that appeared against widow Susanna Roots of Beverly, and was not thought by the justices sufficient to send her before the court of Oyer and Terminer, although it did not take much of a story to do that in 1692, as the court records will fully show. If I obtain any more information in regard to her "flying in y^e chambers over head," at night in Andrew Elliott's house, or get hold of what Leonard Austin might have said if called upon to testify, you shall have it.

BADBY PARISH.

THE researches of Mr. Jesse Root of Berlin brought to light the fact that John Root who settled in Farmington, came from a small parish in Northamptonshire, England, by the name of Badby. It was supposed by the compiler of this work that the branch of the family which first settled in Hartford, and afterwards removed to Northampton, was nearly allied to that in Farmington, and that Thomas of the former places was either a brother or near kinsman of John of the latter.

The parish records of Badby examined by Mr. Russell Harper Root of New York, seem to indicate that they were brothers. The first record found in the old parish book was of the marriage of

JOHN ROOTE and Ann Russell in the year 1600. He lived, and probably died, at Badby. The record of their children runs as follows:

- aa.* I. MARY, bap. at Badby, Dec. 21, 1600.
- bb.* II. SUSANNAH, bap. at Badby, Oct. 18, 1603.
- 350. III. THOMAS, bap. at Badby, Jan. 16, 1605, f.
- 2800. IV. JOHN, bap. at Badby, Feb. 26, 1608, f.

(U)

Besides this there is a record of the death of Thomas Roote on the 5th of April, 1609. Whether this was the father or brother of the John Roote who married Ann Russell, is not known. No further records of the family were found, from which we may reasonably infer that the family left the place, and was in all probability the same stock that emigrated to America. Thus the English records and the American traditions are in harmonious accord. The family names on the English list, and the names given by John of Farmington to his children also serve to indicate the relationship.*

TOPOGRAPHY OF BADBY, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, THE ENGLISH HOME OF THE ROOTE FAMILY.

From Baker's History and Antiquities of Northampton, the Directory of Northamptonshire, Lewis's Topographical Dictionary, and the British Gazetteer, the following facts are collected:

The name of this place may be derived from the Saxon bad or bade, a pledge in security, and bye, a dwelling or habitation, in allusion, possibly, to circumstances now forgotten, connected with its original foundation.

Badby, anciently called Baddebi, is two and a half miles from Daventry, adjoining. The village stands on the side of a sandy ascent called Badby-down, and there are numerous springs of water, and quarries of hard blue rag-stone in the neighborhood. Descending the hill the village is seen spreading along a valley; and combined with the wood and the downs rising immediately in the background, composes a rural landscape in no common degree pleasing and attractive. Bridges (in a work published in the early part of the century) states it to be "a village of about 86 houses, exclusive of the innships, which are three, the Court House, Roots-house, and Burchill-house." By the census of 1801, it contained 109 houses and 462 inhabitants, and by that of 1811, 98 houses and 447 inhabitants.

Lewis (still later) speaks of the place as containing 547 inhabitants. On a lofty eminence called Arbury Hill, there is an intrenchment including an area of about ten acres, supposed to have been a Roman camp. Badby Wood, in which the men of Fawsley enjoyed right of common, was enclosed for a park in years 1245-6, and granted by charter to the Abbot of Gresham. The wood now consists of 180 acres, and is the property of Sir Charles Keightley, Bart. The drive from the entrance lodge connects with and forms a beautiful approach to Fawsley Park. (Fawsley lies south of Badby.) It is peculiarly rich in indigenous plants, some of which are very rare. Badby was entered in Domesday-book under the head of Croyland Abbey.

* In Baker's History of Northamptonshire it is stated that Hugh Russell, of Thorp Mundeville, was grantee of Fawsley (temp. Joh. ob. 19th Hen. 3) in the year 1235. He may have been the ancestor of Ann Russell, who m. John Roote of Badby.

About the year 1369 the peculiar doctrines of Wicliffe were introduced, and met with much favor in Northamptonshire. Badby and Newnham were together as a manor till 1634-5. The manor of Newnham was purchased at that date by John Thornton, Esq. Newnham registers commence 1552; the Badby registers in 1559. In early Saxon records "Newham" is a parochial chapelry to Badby. The church at Badby was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. It stands on the north-west end of the village, and consists of a nave and side aisles, south porch, a chancel, and a tower containing five bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1707, the former steeple having fallen down in 1705. The chancel is entered through an open pointed arch; the eastern window of the chancel is a beautifully painted one of three lights, with mullions trefoiled; in the north aisle is a trefoiled piscina cut out of the eastern pillar, and in the south wall of the chancel are two seats under uniform arches, supported by circular columns, and adjoining them is a piscine under a cinquefoil-headed arch. The living is a discharged vicarage united to that of Newnham in the deanery of Daventry, rated in the king's books at £14, endowed with £200 private benefaction, and £200 royal bounty. It is in the patronage of the dean and chapters of Christ church, Oxford. There is an endowed Sunday-school, and also a weekly school, which has the benefit of an endowment left in 1802 by Mr. Keightley.

At the time John Roote of Farmington (and probably Thos. Roote of Hartford and Northampton) emigrated from Badby, Raphael Heywood, B. D., was the rector of the parish, Charles I was king of England, and the great civil war, which resulted in the establishment of the commonwealth, was impending.

{ Hartford, Ct.
 Northampton, Mass.

THOMAS ROOTE, believed to be the son of John Roote and Ann Russell, of Badby, England, born Jan. 16, 1605, came to this country about the year 1637, and was among the first settlers in Hartford, Ct., where he lived many years, and where his children were born, although on account of the incompleteness of the ancient records of Hartford, as they have come down to this generation, the birth of only one of them (John) is recorded. This Thos. Roote is to be distinguished from the Thomas Rootes who was a resident of Salem, Mass., about the same period, and who remained there until his death. [See former part of this volume, The Rootes Family.] "Thomas Roote (probably this settler of Hartford) went to Pequot in 1637, as a soldier," says Hon. R. H. Hinman. The name of Thos. Roote is mentioned in the list of proprietors of undivided lands in 1639, and may be found on the monument in the old grave-yard in Hartford, in the rear of the Center Church, erected by the Ancient Burial Ground Association in memory of the first settlers of the city. He was a considerable landholder there, and one parcel of the land assigned to him was located on what is now North Main street, about a mile west of the State House. After a residence of about fifteen years in Hartford he removed with his six sons and one daughter, and settled in Northampton, Mass., on the 9th day of May, 1654, as one of the planters of what was then called Nonotuck.* In the Massachusetts Colonial Documents we find that in 1659, on petition, he was appointed one of the selectmen. He was both farmer and weaver of cloth. His record of lands assigned him by the town is dated 7th Dec., 1659. On the 18th of June, 1661, the parish church was gathered, and the Rev. Eleazar Mather was ordained as pastor and teacher of the flock. Among the eight pillars of the church thus organized was Thomas Roote. It is believed by some that he was a deacon of the church. The old Root homestead in Northampton was on King street, opposite where the Roman Catholic church now stands, and it has only within a few years been torn down. Thomas Roote died at a very advanced age, on the 17th of July, 1694, æ. 89, naming his children in his will, and mentioning that he lived with his son Jonathan at the old homestead. [See copy of will at the close of this division.] The name of Thomas Roote's wife is not known.

* The petition showing the high motives and aims which actuated the new settlers of Northampton, was addressed to the General Court of Mass., as follows: "To the Right Worshipful Governor and the Worshipful Magistrates, Assistants, and Deputies of this much honored court—your humble petitioners being fully persuaded of your former promptness and pious endeavors to begin and settle Plantations in such places, as appeared convenient within the liberty of your jurisdiction and Patent for the further enlarging of the territories of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the common utility of the Common Seal are therefore emboldened to present these few lines to your judicious consideration and their request therein that you would be pleased to give and grant Liberty to your Petitioners, whose names are subscribed, and such as shall join with them, according to your wonted clemency, power, right, and authority, from, by, and under you to plant, possess and inhabit the place, being on the Conetiquot River, above Springfield, called Nonotuck, as their own inheritance, according to their divisions by estate, and to carry on the affairs of the place by erecting a town there, to be governed according to the laws, directions and instructions they shall receive from you. Your Petitioners having some knowledge of the place by reason of the propinquity of our habitation to be a place, desirable to erect a town in for the furtherance of the public weal, by providing corn and raising cattle not only for their own, but likewise for the good of others—the propagating of the gospel—the place promising in an ordinary way of God's Providence a comfortable subsistence, whereby people may live, and attend upon God in his holy ordinances without distraction. So committing you to the Guidance of the Mighty Counsellor, we rest your humble Petitioners—Edward Elmore, Richard Smith, John Gilbert, Wm. Miller, John Allen, Richard Wakley, Thomas Burnham, Matthias Foote, Thomas Roote, William Clark, Joseph Smith, John Stedman, &c., &c. Dated May 6, 1653. Granted by the Court, May 18, 1653." Probably only eight of these petitioners settled in Northampton (from 1654 to 1658), and among these eight was Thomas Roote from Hartford.

JONATHAN ROOT, son of Jacob (356), grandson of Thomas (350), b. April 3, 1705 ; m. May 8, 1729, Sarah Tarbox. He lived in the south part of Hebron, Ct., and died about the close of the Revolutionary War (a. 1783). She d. Aug. 9, 1754.

* Rev. Lucius I. Root of Upper Alton, Ill., thinks that there was also a Solomon Root who belonged to this family, a son of William and Hannah, who lived either in Lebanon or Hebron, probably the latter place, and was an earnest tory during the Revolutionary struggle. At the raising of the first liberty pole in Hebron, having no cannon, the enthusiastic crowd tried a pump log girt with iron, which of course burst. The pole was cut down in the night, and on the stump in the morning was found the doggerel, “ Here's Hebron's God cut from the stump,

We'll sing his praise and fire the pump.”

Solomon Root was the author of the rhyme. This was in 1776. The tradition runs that he went to Nova Scotia, and that his descendants are found in Canada and northern New York.

Hon. EPHRAIM ROOT, son of Ebenezer (430), grandson of Thomas (366), b. Nov. 6, 1725, in Coventry, Ct.; m. (1) Carpenter; m. (2) Parker. He was honored with town and state offices while in Coventry. He removed from the place. The following is from Caverly's History of Troy, published in 1839, and probably relates to this Ephraim Root: "In 1788 or '89, Ephraim Root, with his two sons-in-law, Ebenezer and Samuel Bacon, from the state of Rhode Island, purchased a tract of land including most of the farms now owned by Stephen Wheeler and Lyman Wright, together with the house which has been mentioned as standing where Calvin Bemis's now stands (the fourth house built in the village). With the assistance of his sons-in-law Root built a saw-mill a little below the one owned by C. Carpenter. For some eight years Esquire Root was one of the most prominent men in this part of the town, and, with his sons-in-law, gave quite an impetus to the business of the place. But like too many of the business men, he did not always count the cost of the prosecution of his plans, and the result was that he became embarrassed in his financial affairs, and was obliged to suspend business, and his property passed into the hands of his creditors. He removed to another part of the town, where he died in indigent circumstances."

Hon. JESSE ROOT, son of Ebenezer (430), grandson of Thomas (366), b. Dec. 28, 1736 (O. S.), or Jan. 10, 1737 (N. S.), in Coventry, Ct. ; m. May 18, 1758, Mary Banks of Newark, N. J. He d. March 29, 1822, æ. 85. She d. at Coventry, Dec. 5, 1813, æ. 81.

The following sketch is compiled partly from a manuscript lecture on The Life and Times of Judge Root, furnished by the Rev. Marvin Root, and in part from other sources :

This distinguished jurist commenced his educational course in the common school of Coventry. When he had taken up the study of the classic languages he made very rapid progress, and soon outstripped most of his fellow students, and prepared himself for college. Nassau Hall (Princeton College) was then located at Newark, N. J. At this college he was under the instruction of Prof. Burr, the father of Col. Aaron Burr. He graduated October 3, 1756, in the 20th year of his age, and received the first honors of the college. At the close of his college course Mr. R. returned to his native state, and studied theology with the Rev. Samuel Lockwood, D. D., of Andover. In about six months, upon the 29th of March, 1757, he became a candidate for the ministry, being licensed by the Hartford South Association. Though an able and acceptable preacher, he did not long remain in that profession. The early death of his brother Ebenezer, rendered it necessary for him to leave his ministerial labors for a time, and take charge of his father's family. While settling the estate of his father, who died at the advanced age of 85, he became acquainted with the senior Judge Trumbull, who put some law books into his hands and advised him to qualify himself for the bar. Col. Elderkin, and Judge Dyer of Windham, also urged him to the same course. Thus family circumstances and the advice of honored friends, were the immediate occasions of his changing his profession. One anecdote related of him has respect to this period of his life. When engaged in conducting religious worship one Sabbath, it is said that he was so much diverted by a bird that had flown in at the open window, in its repeated efforts to pluck a feather from the bonnet of a lady in the congregation, that he was led by his keen sense of the ludicrous, even against his better judgment and most devout feelings, to open his eyes in prayer-time to see how the contest was going on, and was thereafter led by this fact to moralize upon his want of peculiar adaptation for his work. But whether this traditional story be true or not, or whether the incident had any such effect upon him as related, at least Providence in some way seemed to him to indicate a change in his pursuits, and a most important sphere opened before him as his future work. He remarked once, in familiar conversation with a friend, "I never intended to be a lawyer, but by degrees they made one of me." He was admitted as an attorney-at-law at Windham, in February, 1763, and soon settled in Hartford, Ct. In his newly chosen sphere he was destined to excel, and to obtain a position beyond that reached by many of the brightest intellects of his day. With exception of the years spent in Congress, etc., he was an advocate at the bar for twenty-six years, and was esteemed very highly as a successful lawyer and an honorable competitor. He possessed a share of mother wit which he could advantageously use as time and circumstances required. On one occasion when a case came up in Windham Co., involving a disputed title to a certain piece of land, it appeared in testimony that the line, in surveying, was not run through a certain marsh. Mr. R. inquired of his opponent, "Why was not the line surveyed through the swamp?" His competitor replied, "I suppose on account of the difficulty of going through." "Ah!" said Mr.

Root Genealogical Records.

R., "that was not the reason. They were afraid that they should find the little animal there!" alluding to the well known bull-frog fight in Windham. He resided some of the time in Hartford, and part of the time at Coventry, while practicing as an attorney. Says the Rev. M. C. Welch, D. D., in a biographical sketch of Judge Root, published in the Christian Spectator: "He early took a lively interest in the concerns of his country in general, and especially between the then colonies and the mother country. As an unflinching patriot, he defended the colonies both with his tongue and his pen. He also held himself ready, when called, to risk his life in defending the colonies. He had just reached middle life when this strife commenced. He possessed that spirit of true patriotism which preferred an honorable death in defence of the civil and religious rights of men, to ignominious vassalage, or the chief station among a horde of slaves." He was an active and influential member of the Council of Safety, which originated and completed the project of capturing Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Gen. Washington was at Hartford in consultation with the Council of Safety, when the rumor of Arnold's treachery first reached him. It was in this same council that the plan was matured for the siege at Yorktown. Mr. R. received from Gov. Trumbull a captain's commission, dated Dec. 30, 1776, and, in three days from the date of his commission, was on his march to join the army at Peekskill, N. Y., with a full company of volunteers which he raised in Hartford. He was soon made a lieutenant-colonel by the Assembly, and soon afterwards appointed colonel. He was then advanced to the rank of adjutant-general to the department to which he was attached. From this post he was honorably discharged by Major-General Putnam. Together with Jabez Hamlin and others, he had been appointed to sign the bills of credit in the colony of Connecticut, ordered by the Assembly on the 20th day of April, 1775. In May, 1779, he was chosen a delegate to the Congress of the confederacy, and continued there till the close of the war, in 1783. "He was elected a member of the old Council, or Senate of Connecticut, for a series of years, from 1780 to 1789, and he was, at least for a time, chairman of the Council. In this place of responsibility and trust his associates were such men as Roger Sherman, William Williams, John Treadwell, Stephen Mix

Mitchell, Samuel Johnson, and Oliver Ellsworth. Of the character of the men who composed the old fashioned Council of State, it has been said, 'they were the leading men of their time.' While practicing law, Sylvester Gilbert, Tapping Reeve, and Oliver Ellsworth, all of them afterwards celebrated as lawyers, were among his pupils in legal science. On the visit of Washington to New England, after his election to the presidency, Judge R. was appointed to deliver the address of welcome at Hartford. In 1789 Col. R. was appointed assistant judge of the Superior Court of Connecticut, and was appointed chief justice in 1798, although he presided as such a year or two previous, during the illness of Judge Adams, his predecessor. In his three-cornered hat, and with his side-arms, he presided on the bench with dignity and firmness, and yet with complaisant ease. He published, in 1798, Reports of Cases adjudged in the Court of Errors of Connecticut, from 1789 to 1793, and a second volume in 1802. A characteristic essay on legal science, in the introduction to the work, shows his philosophical turn of mind. "During his term of service (nine years) when no clergyman was present to open the court with prayer, the judge in person would officiate as chaplain." "It was long a settled maxim with him that offices of such high importance ought in all cases to be relinquished while the individual was still in the full vigor of his mental powers, so that the community might not suffer from the imbecility and incompetency of public servants. On this ground he gave up public business, and retired to private life at the age of seventy. He took this step when he was as capable of public business as at any period of his life, and when no law forbade his continuance in the office. This step was an indication of a great mind, and a mark of sound wisdom." He retired from this office in 1807. For a period of thirty-two years he had been almost incessantly in public service. After this, however, he was a member of the legislature for a period, and in 1808 he was chosen one of the electors of president and vice-president. He also was a member of the Connecticut State Convention that formed the new constitution in 1818. He was then 81 years of age, and his mental faculties were still unimpaired. It was said of him that "probably no man in Connecticut has at any age performed the duties of these high and important stations to greater advantage or to more general satisfaction. Few ever equalled him." In his native town he esteemed it an honor to hold the office of school visitor, and he continued in this position to the last day of his life, one of his last acts being to visit the common schools. He was a member of the American Academy and of the Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences, and he received the degree of LL. D. while chief justice, from his Alma Mater, Princeton College. In his social relations he was kind and affectionate, and he was beloved and respected by all the good. He was a man of many friends, though he sometimes made enemies by his firmness in adhesion to the right, and his exhibition of religious principle, and he abounded in acts of charity. His patriotic devotion to his country was pure and unquestionable. Brought up by pious parents, he became a Christian at an early period of life, and throughout his history was distinguished as a man of exemplary piety. He was sincerely and devotedly attached to the great doctrines of the Gospel. At the age of eighty-five, the last year of his life, he was accustomed to attend prayer-meetings and religious conferences. In the evening of his death he said: "I set out on a pleasant journey in the morning, and I shall get through to-night." In his early youth Judge Root had laid the foundation for a long life by a right development of his physical constitution, which was also naturally very strong. He engaged in active labor, and in athletic sports, and was noted for being the best ball-player in his neighborhood. He was a man of noble personal appearance, his features somewhat resembling those of Washington, though they were rather more prominent; his form was tall and rather stout, and his manners dignified yet easy.

was a daughter of C. W. Stockton of Walton, N. Y. The classical education of this distinguished public man was obtained at Dartmouth College, N. H., where he graduated in 1793, in the same class with Samuel Bell, LL. D., afterwards governor of New Hampshire; Asa McFarland, D. D., of N. H.; Zephaniah Swift Moore, D. D., president first of Williams College, and then of Amherst College; Rev. Mr. Riddel of Deerfield, Mass., and Hon. Richard E. Newcomb of Greenfield, Mass. After leaving college he taught school for some time, and then studied law with Hon. Sylvester Gilbert, who was judge of probate and member of Congress. About this time he published Root's Arithmetic, the first arithmetic based on the decimal currency. Of this production John Randolph once spoke in Congress in a sneering manner in order to excite irritability in its author, but on account of the scathing rebuke in Gen. Root's rejoinder, the great Virginian himself lost his temper, and was compelled to retire from the contest, after fixing upon his antagonist the title of the "Delaware catamount." Mr. Root removed from Hebron, Ct., and settled in Delaware county, then a portion of Otsego county, N. Y., where he had a large legal practice, and began to take an active part in politics, and to gain popularity with the masses. His son-in-law, Hon. Selah R. Hobbie, afterwards assistant post-master-general, was for a time associated with him in the law. In 1798 he first appeared in the legislature of New York as a representative to the Assembly, of which he was afterwards a member in the following years, viz: 1799, 1801, 1802, 1818-21, 1826, 1827, and 1830, and state senator eight years, being altogether more than twenty years in the state legislature. In 1800 he was one of the presidential electors, and aided in electing Jefferson. In 1803 he was chosen from his district as a representative to Congress, and was also reelected to the same post in 1809, 1812, 1815, and 1831. He was in Congress sixteen years. In 1821 Gen. Root introduced a bill in the New York Assembly, "declaring that slavery could not exist in this state, being inconsistent with its constitution and laws." He was unable, however, to obtain a vote on the bill. During his legislative career he was three times chosen speaker of the Assembly, in 1827, 1828, and 1830. He was also a prominent member of the convention that met in 1821 to form the state constitution. He drew up the address to the people, which was signed by the president of the convention and published, favoring the new constitution and submitting it to them for their decision. In 1822 he was chosen lieutenant-governor of the state, under Gov. Yates, which office he held two years. He was subsequently associated with the revisers of the laws of the state, and was president of the Court of Appeals and Errors. In 1830 he was nominated for governor by the workingmen's party, but declined the nomination. While lieutenant-governor, Messrs. King and Verplanck, editors of the newspaper called the New York American, had published a libel against him, charging him with being intoxicated while in the discharge of his official duties. Gen. R. sued the editors and obtained a verdict of $1400, which, being appealed to the Court of Errors, was affirmed. [See 4 Wend. Reports, p. 113.] While in the Congress of 1832 Mr. R. left the democratic party and joined the opposition to Gen. Jackson. In the caucus of the republican party in the House of Representatives which nominated Crawford and Gallatin, he received some votes as candidate for vice-president. He was chosen state senator by the whigs, and in 1841 offered the celebrated resolutions in favor of the recharter of the U. S. bank. He was usually denominated General,* having in the capacity of major-general commanded

* The following anecdote has been about worn threadbare in the frequent recital, but claims a place in this volume, as it has been so familiarly used in playful allusion to the name with reference to other members of the family. The more common, and perhaps the correct version of the story, is that the remark of Lorenzo Dow was addressed to Gen. Root and Jephtha Bush, and that Dow told them that there was "not a Root or a Bush visible there."

Dr. John W. Francis, in his Anniversary Discourse before the New York Historical Society, Nov. 17, 1857 (Hist. Mag., vol. II, p. 47), says: "I was, in the summer of 1824, at Utica with an invalid patient. It so happened that Lorenzo Dow at that time held forth in an adjacent wood, having for his audience some of the Oneida and Reservation Indians, together with a vast assemblage of the people of Utica and the neighboring villages. Mounted on an advantageous scaffolding, he discoursed on the rewards of a good life, and pictured the blessings of heaven. Upon his return to the hotel there were found among the occupants a Mr. Branch and old General Root, so familiarly known for the opprobrious name of 'the Big Ditch,' which he gave to Clinton's canal. These two gentlemen, addressing Dow, told him they had heard him say much of heaven, and now begged to ask him if he would describe the place. 'Yes,' says Dow, with entire ease, 'heaven is a wide and expansive region, a beautiful plain, something like our prairie country, without anything to obstruct the vision — there is neither Root nor Branch there.'"

the state militia. After the expiration of his senatorial term he was somewhat withdrawn from active political life, but still retained a prominent influence. He had played a conspicuous part in the history of New York state, and few men were more widely known. The town of Root, Montgomery county, N. Y., formed from Canajoharie and Charleston, Jan. 27, 1823, was named after him. "For half a century he was a zealous politician, but was never known to use dishonorable means in prosecuting his designs. As a friend he was sincere and frank, zealous and trustworthy, ever ready to perform a service for others. While very severe upon a political antagonist, he was a noble-hearted man, and generous in his benefactions. His personal appearance was much in his favor, being tall, stout, and of great physical power." "His intellect and tastes," says Lanman, "were highly cultivated." "In debate he was bold, ready and convincing. He outlived most of his political collaborators in early life, attaining to the venerable age of 74 years." He gave by deed the public square for the use of the court-house and other county buildings at Delhi. He was the first master of Cassia Lodge of Masons in Delhi, and the charter granted by De Witt Clinton, as grand master, to Gen. Root, is preserved, and bears date March 1, 1809. He was very fond of his garden, and devoted much of his time there, in studying horticulture. He also prepared with a great deal of care and labor, considerable information with respect to the early history of the notedly "tall and portly race of Roots." Gen. R. died Dec. 24, 1846, in New York, on his way to Washington, D. C.

Major SAMUEL ROOT, son of Samuel (513), grandson of Samuel (406), b. Feb. 11, 1763, at Southington, Ct.; m. Feb. 3, 1785, Lucy Couch, who was b. 1767, at Meriden, Ct. Maj. Root was a soldier in the Revolution. He enlisted as a volunteer at the age of sixteen, and for a time was an orderly of General Washington. Like others of the family, he was of resolute and courageous temperament, which was specially manifest on a particular occasion, and gave unquestionable evidence of this trait in his character. From some unusual circumstance pertaining to the enemy at a certain time, an effort was made to raise a volunteer company to undertake a very hazardous expedition. To carry out the measure, the soldiers were called out to ascertain who among them would volunteer for the emergency. As soon as the question was put to the soldiers, he at once responded to the call, and was the first to tender his services, but, in consequence of his youth, General Washington would not consent that his proposition be accepted. He continued in the war three years, and in later life received a pension. He d. Dec. 18, 1829, æ. 66, at Bernardston, Mass. She d. May 24, 1849, æ. 82.

Son :

THOMAS HANSON, who graduated in the military school at Middletown, Vt. He was a major-general of militia of the state of Vermont. He was afterwards appointed colonel of the Ninth United States Infantry, displayed signal ability and bravery in the Mexican war, and fell at the storming of Chapultepec, Sept. 12, 1847, while leading his regiment to the assault.

His Son, Thomas Edward Greenfield Ransom, born in Norwich, Vt., Nov. 29, 1834, inherited his father's sterling qualities, and his military skill. He was with Gen. Grant at the capture of Fort Henry, and at Shiloh, in the language of Gen. McClernan, "at a critical moment performing prodigies of valor, though reeling in his saddle, and streaming with blood from a serious wound." He also participated in the campaign against Vicksburg, and was once termed by Gen. Grant, on whose staff he served for a time, his "best fighting man." Gen. Howard said of him: "He is a soldier of modesty, capacity and bravery, equal to any in this army." He was appointed brigadier-general, his commission dating Nov. 29, 1862. He was wounded in the battle of Sabine Cross-Roads, April 8, 1864, and died from disease after the taking of Atlanta, in Georgia, Oct. 29, 1864.

country was in a depressed condition, Capt. R. was called to hold various offices of trust and responsibility in his native town, and several times during his life he represented Coventry in the state legislature. In the year 1781, under the ministry of Rev. Nathan Strong, he, with his wife, became united with the Congregational church. But a few years elapsed ere all his surviving children were brought into the fold of Christ. Capt. R.'s constancy and fervency, his liberality in giving, and self-sacrificing spirit, made his life a useful example, and oftentimes a reproof to those about him. His last sickness was of a few weeks continuance, and was attended with much distress of body; but the grace of God was sufficient for him. "Everything," said he, "has failed me but Christ."

* When quite a young man he united with the Baptist church at South Bay, ten miles from Fort Ann, and is still a member of that church. He has always been noted for his honesty, which has never been questioned. He was a Clay whig, and afterwards a republican in politics. He has been identified with the temperance cause, and at the age of sixty refused longer to use tobacco, because the example was deleterious to the young, in whose welfare he always had a lively interest, although he had used it for more than forty years. He is a man of great decision of character. Although nearly ninety, his memory is still retentive, he writes a good hand, and spends much of his time in reading. Regular in his habits, he sleeps just so many hours, and works hard the balance of the time. He was once sick with a fever which lasted about two weeks, and that is all the sickness he has ever had. In his prime he was five feet and eight inches in height, and weighed about 160 pounds. All of his family, with one exception, have dark eyes, dark complexion, and very dark hair. His family occupy prominent positions in society.

The following notice was published in the Independent :

A GOOD MAN GONE.—A letter from Rev. Dr. Holbrook of Homer, Cortland Co., N. Y., informs us of the death of Mr. Elias Root of that place, aged 70 years. Dr. Holbrook says :

“He was a plain but strong-minded farmer, of industrial and frugal habits. Having no children, he has for several years past given for benevolent objects his whole income, except what was necessary for his own and his wife's support ; and his gifts have sometimes amounted to a thousand dollars per annum. Though seventy years of age, his habits of activity and industry were not relaxed. He worked as diligently as though he were the greatest miser on earth; and on the very day he was taken sick he chopped wood for the market. When remonstrated with sometimes by his neighbors for not giving up labor and enjoying the ease of pecuniary independence, his reply was 'why should I not work? I am strong and hearty, and I can do good with what I earn.' That was his grand motive. At his death he left all his property, by will, to his wife, providing, with her full approbation, that at her death what remains shall be divided equally between the American Home Missionary Society, the American Board, the American Missionary Association, and the New York State Education Society (Congregational), for aiding indigent students for the ministry, less $500 for the Bethel cause. This is the first legacy to our new education society. The various societies will each probably realize a considerable sum ultimately from his estate. He was a native of Farmington, Ct., and of the genuine Puritan stock."

He graduated and commenced the practice of medicine the year of his marriage in Chatham, N. Y., and was esteemed and successful in his profession, always having a large practice.

The following notice is taken from the Christian Advocate and Journal. "He had been for forty-six years a practicing physician in that town; a member of the Methodist Episcopal church forty-one years, and an officer in the church forty years. Whether leader, steward or trustee, he was always faithful to the trust committed to him. His piety from the first to the last shed forth a clear and steady light. He was a man of noble purposes, generous impulses, and great practical benevolence. He had a penetrating and comprehensive mind, a fine perception, and elegant taste, with a sound judgment. His piety was sincere, without ostentation, and produced a gracious influence upon the community where he resided. During his sickness when prayer was offered in his room he was very happy, and frequently praised the Lord with a loud voice. As death drew near the perfect love which he possessed cast out all fear." Mrs. R. d. March 15, 1861, æ. 62. Dr. R. d. July 8, 1865, æ. 71.

HON. ELIAS ROOT, son of John (922), grandson of Asahel (595), b. Nov. 31, 1806, in Fort Ann, Washington Co., N. Y. Mr. Root began life for himself while yet a mere boy, and by the resources of his intellect and the energy of his character, has successfully made his way up to the position he now occupies in public and private life. He is well known as an energetic, self-made man, of methodical business habits, efficient in legislative and other public duties, and an earnest Christian. Having received an ordinary common school and academical education, he engaged in teaching in Newburgh, Orange Co., N. Y. He remained there two years, when, at the age of 21, he engaged in the mercantile trade of that village, remaining there till 1831. He then removed to Herkimer Co., in the then town of German Flatts, still continuing his mercantile pursuits, to which he at that time added an extensive produce business. He remained there till 1856, when he removed to Oswego, where he has since resided. His paternal grandfather and his father were both natives of Rensselaer county. The former died at the age of 82, and the latter is still living at the age of 88. Mr. Elias Root was one of the founders of the Mohawk Valley Bank, of which he was vice-president. He is now president of the Marine Bank of Oswego. He was loan commissioner under Gov. Wright, and supervisor for three years in Herkimer Co. He was a member of the legislature of the state of N. DIVISION II.

The Farmington Line.

FIRST GENERATION.

2800.

Farmington, Ct.

JOHN ROOTE, believed to be the son of John Roote of Badby, Northamptonshire, England, who married Mary Russell in 1600 (and the register of whose children, baptized in infancy, includes the names of Mary, Susannah, Thomas, and John), was born in Badby, according to the parish records, Feb. 26, 1608. The following note made by Mr. Jesse Root, deceased, who was a school-teacher in Berlin, Ct., where his ancestors had lived from generation to generation, and not many miles distant from the old homestead in Farmington, Ct., and who, being an invalid for many years, spent some leisure time in investigating the family history, reveals the English origin of the family, and has been confirmed by investigations abroad. [See preface to Part II, Division I.] He writes: "John Root, our Puritan ancestor, emigrated from a place in England called Badby. His father was deceased, and he lived with an uncle, a brother of his father, and was adopted. His uncle was a man of wealth, advanced in years, and a zealous opponent of popery, and it is my impression one of the nobility. He insisted that John, our ancestor, should go into the Parliamentary army under Cromwell, to fight against Charles I, and the Catholics. He had an aversion to war, and chose rather to join a company of Puritans who were coming to this country. When he arrived he came to Farmington, and was one of its first settlers, in 1640. He married Mary Kilbourn about that date." The emigrants locating in Farmington were mainly from the neighborhood of Boston, Newtown, and Roxbury, in Mass. They began the settlement in 1640, and among them John Root was a prominent citizen. As above indicated, he married, soon after his settlement, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Frances Kilbourne.* She was born in the year 1619, at Wood Ditton, England, and came to this country in the ship Increase, in 1635. They were both in full communion with the Farmington Congregational church. He d. Aug., 1684 [æ. 76], leaving a good estate valued at £819. She d. in 1697 [æ. 78]. He appears to have been eleven years older than his wife at their marriage, and she survived him thirteen years.

SECOND GENERATION.

FARMINGTON LINE.

Westfield, Mass.

JOHN ROOTE, son of John Sen., of Farmington (2800), b. a. 1642, in Farmington, Ct. His father, John Root Sen., subscribed the articles of settlement adopted by the planters of Mattatuck, afterwards Waterbury, Ct., and was accepted in behalf of one of his sons, as original proprietor, Jan. 15, 1678. The father, called Goodman Rote, "was one of the committee, in 1677, to take into consideration the expediency of changing the village site. As to the son (John) his name is among those who had a division of fence in 1680, but he is spoken of no more."* He probably never lived in Waterbury. He was m. by Rev. Fayette Chapin, Oct. 18, 1664, to Mary, daughter of Robert Ashley, who located first in Roxbury, Mass., and afterwards removed to Springfield, Mass., with Hon. Wm. Pynchon and his company. She was b. Feb. 6, 1644.† John Roote Jr.,

* As much confusion has arisen respecting the origin of the Westfield families of Roots, and because John Roots of Woodbury, instead of John Roote of Westfield, Mass., has been supposed to be the son of John Sen. of Farmington, it is proper to give some of the facts by which it is clearly proved that John, Samuel and Thomas of Westfield were sons of John Sen. of Farmington.

1. John Roote Sen. deeded to his son John of Westfield in 1684, the year the former died.

2. Joseph Roote of Farmington, in 1721, sold to John, son of John of Westfield, deceased (1687), land which belonged to his father John, in Southington. [See provision made in will of John Sen., concerning the sale of land.]

3. Caleb Root (son of Caleb who d. 1712), sold in 1730, $\frac{1}{8}$ of right which descended from his grandfather John Sen. [The six were John, Samuel, Thomas, Stephen, Joseph and Caleb.] Samuel, son of Caleb, sold $\frac{1}{12}$.

4. The will of Samuel Root, son of John Sen. (deacon Samuel Root of Westfield, see No. 2802), did not give satisfaction, and his property was equally divided by mutual agreement of all the heirs, among the children of his brothers and sisters, and a like portion to John Davis, his adopted son. The names appended to this agreement are those of the children of John and Thomas Root of Westfield, and Stephen, Joseph and Caleb Root, and Isaac Bronson of Farmington, as their attorneys.

† Brownson's History of Waterbury, p. 29. From the Hist. of Ancient Windsor, it would appear that Mary, dau. of Robert Ashley of Springfield, Mass., b. April 6, 1641, m. the second John Root of Farmington, afterwards of Westfield, Mass.—a difference of date.

was made freeman in 1669. He held for a time the office of commissary at Westfield, as the General Court of Massachusetts allowed him £14 in 1680, for his services. He d. Sept. 24, 1687, æ. a. 44 or 45, leaving an estate valued at £505. She d. March 9, 1702. On his gravestone is the following:

Westfield, Mass.

Deacon SAMUEL ROOT, son of John Sen., of Farmington (2800), b. a. 1644, in Farmington, Ct. He removed with his brothers John and Thomas to Westfield, Mass. He was made a freeman in 1680, and united with the parish church in connection with his wife Mary the same year. He was chosen deacon of the church in 1703. There is no record found of his marriage, but his wife was in all probability a daughter of Thomas Orton, who, in the division of his estate by himself, in 1688 (to escape the great expense of administration during the tyrannical reign of Andros) mentions the name of one of his children as Mary Root. She was b. May 16, 1650. Deacon Root died Nov. 27, 1711. His wife survived him, but they had no children. John Davis, however, was his adopted son.

Root Genealogical Records.

His will did not give satisfaction, and his property was divided, by mutual agreement, in equal shares among his brothers and sisters, leaving also an equal share (the seventh) to John Davis. This mutual agreement, recorded in Northampton and signed by all the children or their attorneys, is a sufficient proof in itself of what has been doubted, that John, Samuel, and Thomas, were brothers of Stephen, Joseph and Caleb. The following inventory of the library and armory of this first Deacon Root on record, furnishes an interesting catalogue of the literature current in that generation, as well as some indications of his military prowess. He was evidently one of the Cromwellian stamp, who both "trusted God and kept his powder dry," and probably held some military office:

amusement to engage in such manly exercises. He was never

* The following from Bronson's History of Waterbury, p. 289, shows that our ancestors were not permitted the liberty of sleeping soundly in church, while it furnishes an incident in the life of Mr. Samuel Root: "Mr. Leavenworth had the reputation of being what is called a plain preacher, not having always the fear of his people before his eyes. He doubtless thought that it did good to stir them up sometimes roughly. He had among his hearers, a person of some standing, who had the infirmity of sleeping (and probably snoring) in meeting. Thinking perhaps to cure the man's weakness, he on one occasion stopped suddenly in his discourse, and addressing himself to the sleeper, said: 'Wake up! wake up!' The response quickly followed: 'I am not asleep any more than you, Parson Leavenworth; so please mind your own business.' Of course a great commotion followed. Some were indignant, others amused. Two days after, or on the 10th day of June, 1760, the delinquent, Samuel Root, was arraigned on a grand jury complaint, before Thomas Clark, for 'profaning the sabbath or Lord's day, by rude talking in time of public worship, to the disturbance of both minister and congregation, contrary to law.' The culprit confessed that he did talk, &c., and pleaded in justification 'that he had told Mr. Leavenworth that if ever he spoke to him in particular in time of worship to wake up, he would tell him that it was none of his business.' The court looked upon the plea as insufficient, and ordered the guilty party to pay a fine of five shillings and cost of court, taxed at £0 4s. 2d. and stand committed till he comply, &c."

Eli Root is spoken of in Smith's History of Pittsfield, as living near Wendell Square, and as "a worthy magistrate, and a man of sterling character, and one of those early adherents to the whig cause [in the revolutionary time] whose determination, energy, and place in the community, made them of eminent service to their party." Although a patriot, resisting earnestly the encroachments of Great Britain, he, with other prominent citizens, as a committee, signed, in 1774, a paper of instructions to their representative in the legislature, expressive of the alarm and abhorrence of the people at the throwing of the tea of the East India Company into Boston harbor. Although opposed to such proceedings he went in heartily for the Declaration of Independence, and exerted a prominent influence. He was sent, in 1777, to the legislature, to aid in forming the state constitution, and was moderator of the town-meeting in 1779, and one of the committee who drew up instructions for the representatives of the town in the state convention. He was a lieutenant of the militia, and afterwards captain.

Colonel OLIVER ROOT, son of Samuel (2849), grandson of Samuel (2812), b. Nov. 24, 1741 (bap. Dec. 6), at Westfield, Mass. His father died before he could make ready to rem. to Pontoosuck, where he intended to settle, and young Oliver, being an orphan, was bound out at the age of eight to Master King of Westfield, with whom he learned the trade of a shoemaker. He served in the second French war, being about eighteen when he enlisted in the army.* He m. July 10, 1766,

* In the History of Pittsfield, by J. E. A. Smith, Esq., and published by the town, we find the following interesting account of the early life of this distinguished officer: "When the war of 1754 broke out he was, of course, a mere child; but he soon grew a stout youth, and, taking advantage of the law which permitted apprentices to enlist, he joined a company raised in his native place, and marched to Albany by the road cut in 1753, along the Westfield river and through Pontoosuck. This road was but a narrow path for pack-horses, and Col. Root described that portion of it which lay in P. as in horrible condition. No less than five hemlock swamps, some of them most formidable bogs, lay between the Hoosacs and the Taconics. In these the horses were constantly mired, and the men were compelled to carry the poor beasts through, with their burthens upon them, by main strength. This was effected by a file of soldiers on each side, who passed the bands by which their muskets were commonly slung, under the bellies of the animals, and so went marching along. Reaching the seat of war, Oliver Root had the good fortune, as the brave and adventurous soldier esteemed it, to be assigned to the famous corps of rangers organized by Major Robert Rogers. Into this corps the strictest care was taken to admit none but men of the hardiest constitution, accustomed to hunt and travel in the woods, and in whose courage and fidelity the utmost confidence could be placed. Among its officers were John Stark and Israel Putnam, with others of the same character, and a rank and file of similar material, who, together, made up the most splendid corps of rangers known in history. Besides their arms, their only accoutrements were a tin cup and a single blanket for each man; their simple rations a little parched corn pounded to a coarse meal. Singly, or in parties, they lay down to rest wherever inclination and opportunity found them, with no shelter but their blankets. Their strength was sustained, and their unpampered appetites satisfied, with a little corn stirred in their cups with water dipped from the wayside brook or spring; although they did not forbear to forage for choice viands when circumstances favored, nor disdain the game with which the forest abounded, when prudence did not forbid the noise necessary for its capture, or the smoke which would arise in cooking it. Throughout the war the rangers performed the most perilous services, and their exploits were as important to the expeditionary forces as they were dashing in their gallantry and thrilling in their hairbreadth adventures. In all marches they piloted the way, and, scouting along the edges of the columns, rendered surprise or ambuscade impossible. Always on the alert, they patrolled the forests in all directions; making prisoners of unwary enemies, skirmishing with exposed outposts, rescuing captured friends, and giving warning to those in danger, until they surpassed the red man in his own craft, and became the terror of Frenchman and hostile Indian. In such warfare as this the future Colonel Root, like many other officers of the Revolution, found his military school, and became familiar with hardship and danger, as well in the recesses of the forest as on the ensanguined ground before Ticonderoga. With the advent of peace, in 1763, he returned to Westfield. The law freed enlisted apprentices from all claim by their masters upon their earnings; but our young Oliver did not find it consistent with his notions of integrity to avail himself of its provisions, and, upon his return home, he brought his bounty-money, and as much of his pay as by careful economy he had been able to save, and delivered them to his master, saying, in substance: 'This money I might legally retain, but justly and rightfully it is yours; take it.' It is pleasant to know, that when his apprenticeship was completed, Oliver was taken by his master to Pittsfield, and there established by him upon the farm inherited by his father. The same simple-minded integrity characterized Col. Root throughout life; and, in his old age, he refused to apply for the pension to which he was entitled as an officer of the Continental army, maintaining that the act of congress could only have been intended for the benefit of those veterans who had no other means of support, while he, although not wealthy, was comfortably well off."

During the struggle of the colonies with England he became an officer in the Revolutionary army, and displayed coolness, courage and skill, under trying circumstances in several campaigns. He was present at the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga, October, 1777; was major under Col. Brown when that officer fell at Stone Arabia, in the Mohawk valley, October, 1781, and succeeded to the command, winning much honor by the careful conduct of the retreat. When other ammunition failed in the defense of Fort Paris, he drove off the enemy with some horsechains and the fragments of a dinner pot broken for the occasion, and discharged through their solitary gun. He was a man of great worth, and was highly respected by the community. It is said that when he emigrated to Pittsfield there were but five families there. He was an athletic man, of perfect proportions, six feet one inch in height, and was never sick for a day until five days before his death. His six sons were all six feet in height, and some of them over, in their stockings. He used to boast of having 36 feet of boy. At one thanksgiving dinner at the old homestead there were gathered around the festive board sixty-five members of the family, children and grandchildren. On Col. Root's tombstone is the following inscription: "He fought the enemies of his country in two wars, and his only enemies were the enemies of his country."

* From the History of Pittsfield, by J. E. A. Smith, Esq., we extract the following: "The case of Ezekiel Root is a singular one. He was a very pronounced tory in his conversation, and even went so far as to name his children for the British commanders; but all his recorded acts are on the whig side, as in signing petitions, serving on the Committee of Safety, and in volunteering for Bennington and other fields. He was often elected to important town offices, and once at least by the extreme radicals to represent them in the county congress. Though sometimes disciplined for a too loud expression of toryism — to the offense of sensitively patriotic ears — it seems to have been regarded by the community as the eccentricity of a worthy man, which would never stand seriously in the way of duty. He never lost the good will of the people who were not famed for charity toward political opponents.

† One of the daughters m. James Colt of Pittsfield, Mass.; children, Henry and Ezekiel. Judge James D. Colt, and Hon. Thomas Colt are sons of Ezekiel. Mrs. William D. Axtell is a granddau. of Ez. Root, also Mrs. Manning Francis.

military commission of adjutant of the New York state forces in the county of Columbia. He was for a time associated with his brothers in the leather business, and was one of the agents of the Van Rensselaer estate. He made many warm friends, who often referred with admiration to his dignified, courteous and gentlemanly demeanor, and his eminently social qualities. He was frank, witty, and intelligent, and very fond of solid reading, giving the Bible a prominent place in his study. He was also wholly temperate, drinking nothing stronger than water, which was a remarkable record in his day, especially as he was prominent in political circles in Albany. In 1796 he was appointed one of the presidential electors by the legislature of New York, in the interest of the federal party, for the nomination of John Adams. The Berkshire Star thus notices his death: "In the character of Mr. Root was associated every quality that is amiable. Possessing a mind naturally strong and intelligent, he commanded the love and esteem of all who knew him."

JOHN ROOT, son of Roger (2990), grandson of John (2862), b. in 1773, in Southwick, Mass. ; m. (1) Christiana Merrills, only child of Charles and Christiana (Edwards) Merrills of Hartford, Ct. ; m. (2) widow Stewart of Buffalo, N. Y. He was a lawyer, and was distinguished for his legal acumen, while he was equally notorious for his humorous, witty and sarcastic speeches, which frequently set the court-room in a roar of laughter. He practiced in Walton, Delaware county, N. Y., about ten years, and then removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he was quite a prominent citizen. He was a man of gigantic stature, though rather round-shouldered.* He d. Sept. 16, 1849, æ. 76, in Buffalo, N. Y. S. P. His wife survived him a few years.

* From Hon. Wm. Ketchum's History of Buffalo and the Senecas (2 vols., 8vo.), a valuable and interesting historical work, recently published, we extract the following : " Among the early lawyers of Buffalo was the venerable John Root, attorney and counselor at law. He came to Buffalo in 1810. He was the cotemporary of Walden, Potter, Harrison, and other early practitioners in western New York. A book might be filled with the witty sayings and sharp repartees of Old Counselor Root, as he was familiarly named. These are still remembered and often repeated by the older members of the bar, even to this day. . . . On one occasion he and Gen. Potter were opposed to each other in trying a case of assault and battery. Root, in the course of his argument, said he had known a case where a man, from a slight blow of a stick on the head, became idiotic for the rest of his life. Potter, suspecting the counselor of drawing upon his imagination rather than stating facts, interrupted him by the inquiry, ' Who was it ? ' Root turned slowly toward him and said, in a mild voice, ' I don't mean you brother Potter. ' " Hon. Wm. Ketchum also relates the following anecdote: "In a suit between parties where one man had shot another in the leg with a shot gun at a wedding carousal, Root was employed by the plaintiff to prosecute for damages. In the progress of the trial a point was made on the part of the defense, that the gun was charged with peas and not with shot. To rebut this statement Root called up his client, who sat near him, and told him to pull up his pants and show the wound, which had hardly healed. The exhibition of the leg and foot of his client was not creditable to his character for cleanliness, to say the least of it. Root immediately turned to the judge, triumphantly exclaiming, 'Evidently, your honor, not peas, or they would have sprouted long ago.'" After practicing in his profession to an advanced age, Mr. Root retired to a farm upon the lake shore, in the town of Hamburg, but died in Buffalo.

* "Familiarly known in that region as 'Capt.' or 'Squire' Root, (having occupied both military and civil positions that entitled him to these New England prefixes); active in church and Sunday school matters, an affable, kind-hearted gentleman, who commanded the love and respect of all who knew him, his funeral attracted a concourse of mourners such as is seldom seen in a quiet village. Having lived to a good old age, and seen his three sons prosperous and respected, and one of them with a world-wide reputation, and nearly all of his five daughters happily settled in life, his memory will be green in the hearts of not only his children, and a large number of grandchildren, whose highest delight it was to 'go home to Willow Farm,' but to hundreds of others scattered over the broad land, who have enjoyed his hospitalities. His was the first death in the family since his marriage, nearly half a century ago. His exit from earth was calm and glorious as the setting of a summer sun, leaving behind it the radiance of a well-spent life."—Song Messenger.

* He graduated in 1850 from the Berkshire Medical College at Pittsfield, Mass., and settled in New Hartford, Ct., the next year. He was a member of the Connecticut state legislature in the year 1855, being elected on the whig ticket. In the spring of 1856 he went to Kansas with the New Haven colony, at first locating at Wabonsa, but immediately becoming actively interested in the free state cause, having been taken prisoner and robbed by Atchison and the border ruffians. He devoted most of the year 1856 to the free state cause, was in Lawrence when that place was sacked and burned in May; at Topeka on the 4th of July following, when the Topeka legislature was dispersed, at which time he was made a member of the free state central committee, and subsequently the chairman of the executive committee, this being the highest authority recognized by the party of those times. He was elected for two years to the territorial council from Wyandotte, where he settled with his family in the spring of 1857. He was elected the first lieutenant-governor of Kansas, and was acting governor a part of 1861. From this position he entered the army as surgeon, serving through the entire war with the army of the frontier. He is an active politician of the radical Republican school, a deacon of the Congregational church in Wyandotte, where he practices as a physician.

* In Wheeler's History of Congress, we find the following: "He is a stout, well-made gentleman, above the medium height, with a very earnest manner, and a peculiar intonation of voice. Gifted with strong natural powers of mind, and a determination of purpose, proof, apparently, against all external influences, few men seem actuated by a sterner sense of right, or a more conscientious devotion to the requirements of public duty. His course as a member of the twenty-ninth congress was signalized by uniform and unrelenting opposition to the Mexican war. He is one of the number known as 'the immortal fourteen' who voted against the declaratory act of the 13th of May. In the struggle for the organization of the territories in congress, in the winter of 1848, Mr. R. bore a prominent part. On the 13th of Dec., 1848, he offered the following resolution: 'Resolved, that the committee on territories be instructed to report to this house, with as little delay as practicable, a bill or bills, providing a territorial government for each of the territories of New Mexico and California, and excluding slavery therefrom;' which was passed by a vote of 108 to 80."

HELEN MARIA ROOT, dau. of Frederick F. (3651), grand-dau. of Azariah (3082), b. Feb. 13, 1825, in Sheffield, Mass.;

* Mr. R. has won for himself a distinguished reputation for his musical ability as a singer, teacher and composer. His various collections of church music, including a great variety of pieces of his own composition, such as the Sabbath Bell, and the Triumph, have had a very extensive sale. His Musical Curriculum, as an instruction book for the piano, is the result of many years' experience in teaching, and is widely used among the profession. The patriotic music issued by the house of Root & Cady, of which he is the senior partner, created a profound impression during the late civil war. Hundreds of thousands of the Battle Cry, Tramp, Tramp, Just before the Battle, etc., were sold. 350,000 of the Battle Cry of Freedom alone were issued. This musical firm published and sold one hundred and seventy tons of music of their own composition within five years. Mr. R. and family are members of the New Jerusalem church.

Also among the list of Children and Servants in the same vessel the name of Mary Roote, aged 15, is placed under the latter, but she was probably a daughter of Ralph above. This last list (of Children and Servants) is certified by the minister of Stepney parish, as to their conformity to the Church of England. From notices in Drake's History of Boston, we find that in 1638 Ralphe Route had his lot bounded on Muddy River (afterwards Brookline). His house and garden were near the Common. On the 17th of Oct. 1649, Ralph Roote and his daughter Sara, she being under age, petitioned the General Courte and the House of Deputies “for power to confirme a bargaine and sale of a house and land in Reading estated upon the said Sarah by Edward Whitfield, wch land we ha sould to Thom. Taylor of Watertowne,” wch bargaine and sale was confirmed. His wife Ann joined the Boston church in 1639. The early records of Boston mention also the death of Mary wife of Ralphe

Extract from a certain letter written from the South River of New-Netherland, by Adriaen Van Tienhoven to Mr Petrus Stuyvesant, Director-General of New-Netherland, dated Fort Bevers-reede, 9th of Nov. 1648. To the valiant Mr Peter Stuyvesant, &c. I, the undersigned Symon Root, most humbly request due indemnity for incurred losses and damages; first, for the opposition the Swedes offered to my building at Wigquakoing (now Wicacoa, in Philadelphia), in the year 1647; inasmuch as the throwing down the Honble Company's arms, and the destruction of the building erected by Commissary Andries Hudde, rendered it sufficiently apparent, that further occupation there would be prevented by them." LUCY ROOT, dau. of Jacob (450), granddau. of Jacob (384), b. April 18, 1756, in Glastenbury, Ct. She m. Jan. 13, 1773, Ephraim Bailey. He was about 15 years her senior, b. Nov. 11, 1741. They settled in Albany Co., N. Y. Their married life was congenial and happy, though their dispositions were widely different, her husband being naturally quiet and easy, attending to his affairs with few words, while she did not take life so easily, being of a nervo-sanguine temperament. She was of medium stature, with fair skin, blue eyes, and bright red hair, quick in her movements, possessing great energy, extraordinary muscular development and physical strength. It is said that she could with ease lift a barrel of flour from the ground into a wagon. Her husband kept a hotel, and in his absence one day a straggling vagabond made his appearance, and, using offensive language, was ordered out. Refusing to comply with the demand, Mrs. Bailey seized him very unceremoniously and tossed him over the half-door into the street, down which the panic-stricken fellow fled without delay. Mr. Bailey was a devoted Christian, attending strictly to religious duty for fifteen years prior even to his conversion, calling his children around the family altar every day. She for several years before her death entirely lost her sight, and died of old age rather than disease. Their family inherited excellent constitutions, the majority of them living to old age, and four of the children are yet alive. The combined ages of the eleven children who reached manhood is 689 years, average 62 each. Their descendants numbered 12 children, 51 grandchildren, 143 great-grandchildren, and 36 great-great-grandchildren, in all 242. He d. Sept. 11, 1828, æ. 86. She d. July 7, 1845, æ. 89.

Bethlehem, N. Y.

Dr. SOLOMON BAILEY, son of Ephraim and Lucy, b. April 11, 1774, in Chatham Columbia county, N. Y. He was an honest, industrious boy, and having a great desire to obtain an education, labored hard during the day, and studied at night by the light of a pine knot fire. He was more proficient in his studies than most boys of his age and opportunities. His earnings were carefully treasured and handed to his father to aid in liquidating the debt upon the homestead. Having a mechanical taste, he learned the carpenter's trade and pursued it diligently for several years until his health failed, and his attending physician (Dr. Reynolds) advised him to study medicine under his tuition, which he did, finishing his studies with Drs. Low and McClelland, two eminent physicians of Albany. Dr. Bailey obtained his degree of M. D. in 1809, and began his professional life in Schodack, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. He m. Feb. 11, 1812, Miss Joanna Babcock. She was b. Feb. 8, 1789. Shortly after he removed to Bethlehem, near Albany, where he practiced twenty years more, meeting with eminent success and making many warm friends. He then purchased a farm some four miles distant, near the extreme limits of the Catskill mountains. He still continued to practice, but devoted much time to agricultural pursuits, and to the advancement of common school education. He particularly excelled in mathematics, and it was not uncommon for teachers in his vicinity to seek his aid in this branch. Of the nine children, seven are living, and, like their ancestors, have longevity stamped upon their persons. They are extremely muscular, without any tendency to corpulency, weighing from 200 to 225 pounds each, and measuring from five feet nine inches to five feet ten and a half inches in height. Dr. B. is represented in the profession by two sons, Drs. Wm. H. and James S. Bailey, both now practicing in Albany, N. Y. He d. March 16, 1839, æ. a. 65.

amid the strong prejudices of the southern people in view of his northern birth, he succeeded by close attention to business in obtaining a lucrative practice of nearly $9000 specie per annum. His ride embraced a circuit of twenty-five miles, and it was not uncommon for him to travel from sixty to seventy-five miles per day during the sickly season, obtaining little sleep except when riding in his carriage. Possessed of a remarkable constitution and great powers of endurance, Dr. B. never contracted any of the malarious diseases incident to the climate, though exposed to the rays of a torrid sun, to the humid night atmosphere, and to numerous yellow fever epidemics. The state of his adoption seceding, Dr. B. enlisted as a private in the Sixteenth Texas volunteer infantry, refusing to accept a commission as surgeon and brigade surgeon, but always did surgeon's duty, calling forth the warm praise of Gen. Magruder for the faithful performance of his duties at the battles of Galveston and Sabine Pass, Texas. After the war Dr. B. came north to visit his aged mother, and by the persuasion of friends concluded to return to his native city and engage in his profession. The medical department of Soule University, at its annual commencement, March 10, 1869, conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine upon him.
